Hospital Building Fund Over Half Subscribed

Reports of Workers Show Total Subscriptions of $155,371.05—Hercules Powder Company Subscribes $6,000—More Memorials Reported — New Subscriptions Number 723—Final Reports to Be Received at Victory Dinner Tuesday Night.

A total of 723 subscriptions amounting to $43,364.50 was reported by workers in the Kingston City Hospital drive to raise $300,000 at the noon meeting at the armory today, which with the $112,006.55 previously reported brings the total amount so far subscribed to $155,371.05, or over half the amount sought.

The next meeting of the workers is scheduled for Tuesday evening at the state armory when the Victory Dinner will be held and final reports received.

A $6,000 Subscription.

Included in today's subscriptions was one from the Hercules Powder Company at Port Ewen of $6,000 which was obtained through the efforts of R. K. Brewster, head of the concern. The powder company realizes the need of adequate hospital facilities for Kingston and that is the reason they contributed the amount stated, which is one of the largest contributions so far received in the campaign.

Many Memorials.

There are also included in the pledges reported a number of memorials. Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck and daughters subscribed $2,400 for a private room on the first floor in memory of Julia M. Hasbrouck; J. S. Fuller Inc., $1,500 for a nursery bath in memory of Isaiah and James S. Fuller; D. DeWitt Dobbs, $1,200 in memory of Charles Wesley Sec; C. Hiltebrant Dry Dock Company, $1,200 in memory of C. Hiltebrant; Mr. and Mrs. John B. Kearney, $1,200 for a bed in a semi-private room; Mrs. Florence Kendall Kelley, $1,200 for a ward bed in memory of Hermon A. Kelley; Robert Main, $1,200 for a ward bed in memory of Mrs. Robert Main; F. K. Brewster and Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Brewster, $1,200 in memory of Frank K. Brewster.

Junior League Subscribed.

Jane D. Carl, secretary of the Junior League, in contributing to the drive the subscription of the Junior League, wrote: "In view of our appreciation of the cooperation of the doctors and the hospital in our work with babies, the Junior League of Kingston, takes great pleasure in contributing a small sum to be used toward rebuilding the nursery."

A communication was also received from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saunders of Albany avenue extension enclosing a subscription and a word of appreciation for the work that the hospital has done in the past and what it will be able to accomplish with its improved facilities in the future.

Over Half Subscribed.

Harry H. Flemming presided at the dinner in the absence of Dr. George F. Chandler, who was called to Oneonta, and in announcing the results of the campaign as shown by the reports that had been received he called attention to the fact that less than two thousand residents of Kingston had so far contributed to the drive. The reason for this was due to the fact that they had not been seen as yet by the workers. Mr. Flemming urged that between now and next Tuesday every effort be made by the workers to see as many people in Kingston as possible.

"There are many who are just waiting to be seen to subscribe to the drive," said Mr. Flemming.

Van Keuren's Subscription.

C. V. A. Decker in making his report of the work accomplished by his team called attention to the fact that one subscription reported, for $1,000, had been made by W. W. Van Keuren of Albany avenue, who believed not only in the need of increased hospital facilities but also in the future of Kingston.

Victory Dinner Tuesday.

There will be no further meeting of the workers in the campaign until Tuesday evening when the Victory Dinner will be held at 6:30 o'clock at the state armory.

Inquiry Into Radio Situation

Secretary Hoover Announces 600 Applications For New Broadcasting Stations—Listeners Will Be the Victims Unless Steps Are Taken to Prevent Chaos.

Washington, June 11.—With the passage of radio legislation at the present congress regarded as remote, Secretary of Commerce Hoover has started a legal inquiry to determine what steps will be possible to save broadcasting.

Virtually all present broadcasting stations have agreed to remain on their authorized wave lengths regardless of congressional action in a voluntary effort to prevent radio chaos.

Hoover, however, pointed out today that about 600 applications for new broadcasting stations have been filed and that a number of the applicants already have erected stations.

"If these stations decide to go on the air without authority, the present broadcasters may be expected to take steps to protect themselves," Hoover said.

"The small stations will be the sufferers as the big broadcasting stations, by employing high power, will blanket out the little fellows."

Hoover said that in the end the listener would be the victim of the chaos.

Many of the present stations have asked for permission to increase power. Several desire to go to 50,000 watts in order to break through summer static, fading and possible interference expected from authorized stations. Whether the government has authority to regulate the power upon which stations broadcast is a question now under study.

The Department of Commerce may institute new court actions against alleged violators of the radio laws, should no new legislation be enacted. By this method it was anticipated that some test cases might reach the supreme court with a government victory.

THREE MUST DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Boston, June 11.—John J. Devereaux, Edward J. Henlein and John McLaughlin, found guilty of slaying James H. Furneau, aged Waltham Carbarn Watchman last October, must die in the electric chair.

The full bench of the supreme court today overruled exceptions in the case of the three men, who, it was charged robbed the carbarn.

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL INCREASING "DRY NAVY"

Washington, June 11.—President Coolidge today signed a bill increasing the "prohibition navy."

Ten new vessels for the U. S. Coast Guard are to be constructed under the terms of the bill.

The president also signed a navy bill providing equalization of promotion of staff and line officers of the navy.

Auditors Examine City's Books.

Boston, June 11.—Auditors were at work today in the office of the city collector, where, it is alleged, a shortage was discovered. Mayor Malcolm Nichols has suspended Cashier John J. McCarthy and Francis J. O'Connell, a teller. The shortage is said to be in the neighborhood of $6,500.

Mrs. Manos Held For Grand Jury

Woman Waives Examination in Police Court on Charge of Manslaughter in Causing Death of John Herring—Other Cases Before Judge Shufeldt.

Mrs. Mina Manos of Adams street, accused of manslaughter in causing the death of John Herring of Ulster Park in an auto crash on the Strand some time ago, waived examination this morning before Judge Shufeldt in police court and was held to await the action of the grand jury. She was represented in court by Judge Harry E. Schirick.

Mrs. Ray Levine of lower Broadway, arrested on a charge of renting a fifty trip book on the New York Central to railroad detectives, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $15. She was represented by Judge Robert G. Groves.

Woodruff C. Bell, an elderly man residing on Downs street, was arrested Thursday evening by Officer Rappleyea who charged him with public intoxication. As this was the first time Mr. Bell had ever been arrested, sentence was suspended.

Henning Carlson, who said he lived in Chicago, was arrested Thursday for train riding by Officer Tierney of the West Shore police force. The hearing was adjourned to June 15 and bail fixed at $250.

Mary Johnson, a negress who said she lived in Maiden, was arrested Thursday evening by Special Officer Messinger for using profane language on Chambers street. This morning Judge Shufeldt fined her $15.

Two Trainmen Die In Train Mishap

Raleigh, N. C., June 11.—Two trainmen were instantly killed, two others seriously injured, and 50 passengers narrowly escaped with their lives early today when Norfolk Southern Passenger Train No. 4, Raleigh to Norfolk, plunged from a burning bridge over Chicods Creek, near Grimesland, N. C.

A number of passengers in the day coaches and sleepers were slightly injured, but railway officials here declared that none was seriously injured.

The dead: J. R. Slade, engineer, William Herrington, fireman.

Baggagemaster Simpson and Flagman Stevenston were seriously injured in the crash. Relief trains from Norfolk and New Bern, N. C., were expected to arrive some time this forenoon and take the passengers to their destinations.

Sparks from a freight train are believed to have set the bridge afire. It is near a curve, and Engineer Slade was unable to halt his train in time to prevent running onto the flaming structure, after he saw it was ablaze.

Settlement of The Fur Strike

New York, June 11.—The fur strike, which had been in progress for about four months, involving 12,000 workers, was settled today.

Representatives of the Furriers' Union, The International Furriers' Union and the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc., signed an agreement, terminating the walkout.

The agreement, it is understood, calls for a forty-hour week for eight months of the year, and a forty-four hour week during the four busiest months in the industry—September, October, November and December. The minimum wage scale was increased 10 per cent. The workers had demanded a 25 per cent increase.

Doty Will Not Be Executed

Paris, June 11.—Bennett Doty, otherwise Gilbert Clare, the American member of the French Foreign Legion who is charged with desertion, will not be executed, Minister of War Painleve stated today.

M. Painleve said that no sentence had been passed upon Doty, and he intimated that even if a death sentence is passed by the court martial, it will be commuted by the French government.

SHOT TO DEATH IN FRONT OF CHURCH

New York, June 11.—Standing with head bowed in prayer, Peter Containi, forty, was shot in front of the Church of Our Lady of Pompei early today. He died soon after on the operating table at St. Vincent's Hospital. Police believe the murder was the outgrowth of a bootleggers' feud.

Before he died Containi told detectives the name of his assailant, for whom search is being made.

Attempts to Shoot Neighbor and Kill Self Both Fail

Lawrence Rein of Connelly Becomes Suddenly Insane and Turns Shotgun on Neighbor's House—Tries to Drown But Is Rescued—Pronounced Insane.

Suddenly becoming convinced that his neighbors were troubling him, Lawrence Rein, 46 years old, of Connelly, turned his shotgun loose on the home of a neighbor and then attempted to commit suicide by drowning himself in a cistern Thursday afternoon. The water in the cistern was not deep enough, however, to bring about the desired results, and neighbors summoned by the shots called on the State Troopers to take care of the violent man. Pending the arrival of the Troopers, neighbors assisted in getting him out of the cistern and putting on dry clothing. On the arrival of Sergeant Lockhart and Trooper Baker, Rein was brought to the county jail where he was lodged for the night. After his attempt at suicide he became quiet and slept throughout the night, giving the authorities no trouble although a guard was posted to prevent any further attempt at suicide.

Rein is a boat-yard laborer who resides with his maiden sister, Eva. For some time he has not been feeling well but it was not thought his illness would take a violent turn.

About 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon he became convinced that a neighbor was bothering him and taking his shotgun he fired two shots through the window of his home into the adjoining house. The shots went through a window and lodged in a cupboard in the neighbor's kitchen. Fortunately no one was in the room at the time.

Rein then secured a long rope which he tied to a post in the yard, and tying a loop in the other end he placed it about his neck and after removing the cover to the cistern he jumped in. The rope, however, was so long, that it failed to hang the demented man and the water in the cistern was so low that it did not drown him. He stood head above the water when neighbors, alarmed by the shots came to the rescue.

He refused to try to get out of the cistern and had to be bodily lifted from the water. After he had been removed from the cistern he was taken to his house where dry clothing was placed on him and on the arrival of the Troopers he was brought to the county jail.

Dr. E. H. Loughran, jail physician, and Dr. F. J. Dudenhausen of St. Remy were called in and examined Rein. After a careful examination he was pronounced insane by the doctors. Application will be made to County Judge Joseph M. Fowler to have him committed to the Middletown State Hospital for treatment.

BEAR CAT CRANE IS MAKING EXCAVATION

The B. M. S. Transportation Company recently purchased a Byer's "Bear Cat" crane through G. W. Codwise of this city. It is powered by a gasoline motor and for making the excavation for the addition to Reade's Kingston Theatre it is equipped with a clamshell bucket.

This is the first gasoline crane ever operated in Kingston and it attracts much attention from the crowds which stop to watch the work.

STUYVESANT GARAGE WORK BEING RUSHED.

Work is progressing rapidly on the addition to the Stuyvesant Garage at the rear of the Governor Clinton Hotel. The work will be rushed so that the building may be used during the summer. When completed the Stuyvesant Garage will have a storage capacity equal to any garage along the Hudson river. Plans for the addition were drawn by Architect Gerard W. Betz.

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR MIDDLETOWN MERCHANT

New York, June 11.—Federal Judge John C. Knox today appointed Percy R. Battenheim receiver in bankruptcy for Benjamin Travers, who conducted a dry goods store at 19½ James street, Middletown, N. Y. Travers will be examined as to what he did with the large quantity of merchandise he is alleged to have bought.

HUDSON W. C. T. U. TO HOLD KINGSTON POINT OUTING

Mrs. Zimmerman Gets Separation.

Mrs. Catherine Zimmerman of Albany, formerly of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has been granted a separation from Fred W. Zimmerman in papers signed by Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley, and filed June 5th with the Albany county clerk. Mrs. Zimmerman is awarded the custody of her son, John F. Zimmerman, and $10 a week alimony.

3 Involved in Attack on Girl

Salem, Mass., June 11.—Bringing to light an alleged attack upon a pretty 27-year-old bookkeeper in the Salem woods, the police today arrested Francis J. Burke, 22, an employe of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway.

The girl's clothing was ripped from her body as she fought to save herself. Three men are said by the police to be involved.

The story told to the police by Miss Florence Meaney, a respected young woman holding a responsible position with a local firm, is that she was invited for an automobile ride by a man she knew as Bowman Spinney.

When they reached a spot in the woods on Quint street, near the Salem-Peabody line, they were approached by two men, one of whom pulled a gun and held off her escort while the other dragged her from the car.

In the struggle that followed the girl was knocked down, her clothing ripped and torn and her face and body bruised from blows of her assailant.

When the attack was reported to the police Spinney easily proved an alibi and later on the girl's description Burke was arrested. According to police she identified him as the man who drove her to the woods.

He said, according to the police, that he was afraid to go to the girl's assistance because of the pistol held by one of the men and claims two shots were fired over his head to intimidate him.

Killed in Fight Over Taxi Fare

Olean, N. Y., June 11.—Samuel Barr, 31, of Colegrove, Pa., is dead and Seth McGee, 75, also of Colegrove, is dying here today as the result of a heated discussion over a seven dollar taxi cab fare.

Barr, police was told, was engaged by Amos McGee, son of Seth, to convey him to Eldred, Pa., reaching Eldred, the young McGee told Barr to return to his father's home to collect seven dollars due him for the transportation.

The Elder McGee told Barr that he did not have the money. Barr insisted that he pay and a heated discussion followed.

Neighbors reported to police that Barr, enraged, opened fire on the older man with a revolver, pumping five shots into McGee's chest. McGee staggered into another room and returned with a shotgun which he discharged at Barr at close range, the shot entering Barr's heart and killing him instantly.

The aged man was removed to the Bradford Hospital where it is said little hope is entertained for his recovery.

3 Workmen and 2 Cops Killed

Ostravice, Poland, June 11.—Three workmen and two policemen were killed and six workmen and two policemen were seriously wounded when police interrupted an attempt by the workers to sabotage a factory here following a quarrel with one of the managers, it became known today.

The police arrived on the scene after the workers had ejected the manager. The police arrested the leaders of the riot and closed the factory, whereupon the workers attempted to storm the factory. The police opened fire which was returned by the workers.

Order was restored with the arrival of the troops.

Admits Killing His Mother

Milan, June 11.—Renzo Pettine, eighteen-year-old son of Commendatore Pettine, has been apprehended and has confessed to the murder of his mother, according to police.

Madame Pettine's decomposed body was found in a box in the apartment which she shared with her son and in which her son has given rather gay parties for the past few weeks, while his mother's dead body lay crumpled in a box in the apartment.

Renzo, in his alleged confession, declared that two accomplices aided him in his crime and helped him to stow away his mother's body. He steadfastly refuses to reveal the names of his accomplices.

THIRTY-FIVE HAVE ENTERED FOR READE'S BEAUTY TEST

About thirty-five young women of this city have entered their names in the beauty pageant to be held shortly at Reade's Kingston Theatre. Those who desire to take part in the pageant to be staged should apply at the Theatre for information.

Eight Yards, Not Eighty-eight.

Through a typographical error in the big advertisement of Simon's Store at 69 Broadway, in Thursday's Freeman, it was stated that Mr. Singer was selling today and Saturday 88 yards of unbleached muslin at $1. It should have read eight yards for a dollar.

Parties Split on Farm Legislation

Great Split Among Leaders in Republican Ranks—Democrats Are in a Quandary—Indications Are That Congress Will Take No Action.

Washington, June 11.—While the Iowa political explosion continued to detonate around the Capitol today, it appeared better than an even money bet that Congress will fade out of Washington in a few weeks without having done anything to placate the rebellious corn belt in the way of farm relief legislation.

What the political consequences of such neglect will be is a matter that is agitating a good many congressional bosoms—Republican and Democratic alike.

A vote on the McNary-Haugen Bill, which President Coolidge has characterized as "economically unsound," and which Vice President Dawes has pronounced an estimable piece of legislation in every respect, is now scheduled for the middle of next week in the Senate. It has already been defeated in the House by a coalition of eastern Republicans and southern Democrats, and a similar fate probably awaits it in the Senate, although the vote is expected to be close.

Even if the bill is passed by the Senate, it stands little chance of enactment, as it must then go back to the House which already has rejected it, and even should the House reverse itself, with an eye on the November elections, it still must run the gauntlet of the White House. And President Coolidge has clearly intimated a veto awaits it there.

Tincher Bill Unsatisfactory.

There remains only the revamped Tincher Bill, providing a $100,000,000 revolving fund to be loaned to cooperative marketing societies, which Senator Fess, Republican, of Ohio, introduced yesterday as an administration measure. It has been defeated in the House by the corn belt bloc, and it can be defeated in the Senate by the same element.

It is entirely unsatisfactory to the farm bloc and the corn belt.

The corn belt committee of 22 dismissed the Tincher Bill with the observation that the farmers "don't want to borrow any more money, they already owe enough. What the farmers want is better prices, so they won't have to borrow money."

Both parties are badly split on the issue of farm legislation, although the Republican split is more definite, and more significant from a political standpoint.

Both Parties Considering Consequences.

With such Republican figures as Vice President Dawes, Senator Watson of Indiana, Ex-Gov. Lowden of Illinois, and others, leading a fight for passage of a bill which a Republican president has denounced as unsound and radical, a greater split could hardly be imagined. The results of this division will be bobbing up for many months to come in one way or another and may vitally affect the turning of political wheels in 1928.

The Democrats are in a quandary over what party position, if any, to take in the situation. There are two distinct schools of thought on the Democratic side, one which advocates supporting the White House in killing the farm bloc bill, and thereby letting the White House take the onus for it, and one which believes it better political strategy to jump in and help the Dawes-Watson-Lowden combination pass the bill, thus enabling the Democrats to claim credit for it in the approaching election.

The Democrats do not appear to get together any more than the Republicans.

Consequently the prospect today was that after several weeks of desultory fighting, congress will pack up and go home in fear and trepidation to face whatever punishment or approbation the ballot boxes hold.

New Schedule of Electric Rates in Rural Sections

Minimum of Return Per Mile of Line Forms Basis of Terms on Which Central Hudson System Asks Public Service Board's Approval For New Rural Customers.

In view of the rapidly increasing demand in rural districts for electric service, the Central Hudson system of companies has filed with the Public Service Commission a new schedule which relates to the method and terms whereby people outside of cities and villages may obtain electric service.

Heretofore, according to a statement by the company, it has been the practice to subject each individual extension to a survey and an estimate of cost, which required much time.

Under the proposed new method, the company takes the experience of a number of years in rural extensions and establishes a certain minimum of return per mile of line as the basis of the terms upon which groups of new rural customers can be served.

It is stated the new schedule puts prospective rural customers in a position similar to that of the city dweller, who, when he applies for service can at once be given the terms and conditions of such service.

Giving an example of how the new method would work in practice, an official of the company said:

"Suppose 12 people living in a district that could be reached by an extension a mile long were to ask if they could have service, and if so on what terms?

"Under our new rule we could at once say to them: 'Yes, you can have service at the regular rates in your district. The cost of the line requires that we receive at least $30 per month per mile, therefore it is required that each of the 12 customers pay for not less than $2.50 worth of energy a month.' If the number applying should be greater, then the minimum bill would be less. Likewise, if the number were less, the minimum would be correspondingly greater.

"This, in the main, is the heart of the new plan. Its simplicity will greatly expedite the extension of rural lines because a group of applicants for service which necessitates line extensions, can have all the information required at once and they can then decide whether or not they care to avail themselves of the opportunity to get service.

"We believe this plan is a distinct step forward and should serve to stimulate the program of rural extensions which has been going on in our companies for a number of years."

A petition has been filed with the commission asking approval of the plan and asking that it be made effective on and after June 15.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT CLINTON AVENUE CHURCH

The Children's Day program will be given by the Clinton Avenue M. E. Sunday school on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Sunday school will assemble at 10:15 in its meeting room after which it will march to the main auditorium of the church. A very interesting program has been arranged consisting of songs and class pieces. There will also be the infant baptism. The collection of the service will be applied toward the educational fund of the church.

SUPREME COURT APEX OF DIGNITY

Many Tourists Witness Solemn Procedure of Nation's Highest Tribunal.

Washington.—"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! The Supreme court of the United States is now sitting All persons having business before the court are admonished to draw near and give their attention"

These words, intoned impressively by a baritone-voiced young man in somber morning clothes, at the stroke of noon on Mondays during the eight months of the court's session each year, open the "decision sessions" of the highest court of the land in a solemn dignity handed down from the old English courts of law.

A hundred or more lawyers and half as many curious tourists are in the semi-circular room in the senate wing of the capitol facing the nine black-gowned justices, who sit behind a long bench erected on a rostrum

Respect for law, handed down many years, sets the customs of reverence to the justices which are rigidly enforced by attendants Everyone in the courtroom stands as the justices walk slowly into the room from an antechamber, the smiling, red faced chief justice, William Howard Taft, at their head

Silence Commanded.

The chief justice takes the place in the center of the bench, and pages gently push up comfortable chairs behind him and his gowned associates. The marshal intones his "Oyez" summons and adds that "Silence is commanded."

Justice Taft nods to one of the junior justices, who sit on the ends. Justice Holmes, dean of the bench, sits at Taft's right, and McReynolds, second in seniority, on his left, and so on The justice he beckons to reads the docket number and title of a case in which he has written the opinion of the court.

After the opinion is delivered, the justice starts immediately on another opinion, or if he has only one, Taft beckons to another one slightly higher in seniority to read the next. And so on, until Taft himself sometimes reads on opinion. After these are finished, the chief justice reads the orders.

The orders are decisions of the court to admit to review or to deny review of cases which are sought to be brought before the court. The court has considered whether the questions involved make necessary an argument before the court, and these orders are merely announcements as to whether it will be heard.

More than one-half of these applications are denied Many knock but few are admitted

After the orders, the court asks if there are any applications for admission to the bar of the Supreme court. There always are as leading lawyers from all over the country come here with important cases from their states.

New Members Admitted.

The applicants' names are read and they stand up for obsertance by the court. Another lawyer, already a member of the bar, stands with each one and tells the court that the applicant has practiced law in the highest court of his state for three years, and that he has filed certificates to show his good moral character. The applicants are sworn in immediately, in a group, and the chief justice gravely asks the court clerk what cases are on the docket.

The clerk reads the numbers and titles of the cases for that week and then starts reading the list again. After he has read the first number, the court asks if the attorneys are present. They are, usually, and argument of the case is started Each case is given two hours, divided equally between the two sides

The court hears arguments Monday from the time the decisions are ended to 4:30 p m, and from 12 to 4:30 the next four afternoons. On Saturday the nine members of the court meet for conferences, to compare their opinions, make decisions, and submit opinions already written for approval and dissent.

The opinions are kept secret until read from the bench. Chief Justice Taft told a congressional committee recently in discussing appropriations for the court that there had not been a "leak" tipping off a decision in advance of delivery for 30 years, to his knowledge.

Urges Electric "Knife" to Lower Cancer Toll

Champaign, Ill.—Calling attention to the fact that cancer each year kills more than 80,000 men and women in America, a larger number than that of American soldiers killed in the World war, Dr. Disraeli Kobak of Chicago, attending physician at the Cook County hospital, urged upon the surgical section of the Illinois State Medical society the more extensive use of surgical diathermy, an electrical method of removing cancer tissue.

The diathermy method consists merely of generating heat within the tissues by use of an electric current, which has been proven after years of experiment in hospitals and surgical clinics to destroy the cancerous growth as efficiently as the surgeon's knife. Doctor Kobak told that by the use of this newer method many lives might be saved.

Early Clocks

The first clock which shows any relation to our modern idea of clocks is said to have been made in England about 1288 by a monk named Peter Lightfoot. Up to 1370 the use of clocks was confined chiefly to cathedrals and large buildings.

Blackmailing Lotteries

Chinese have long been known as dyed-in-the-wool gamblers, but the extent of their flirtations with Lady Luck has never been fully known. However, some light has been shed on the subject by the knowledge that Shanghai lottery companies have agreed to pay $50,000 a month to Gen. Sun Chuan-fang, tuchun of Kiangsu, in return for his pledge not to impose his proposed tax on the lottery business. Some months ago General Sun announced that he found it necessary to tax all sales of lottery tickets and a protest was raised. This new agreement will serve to eliminate the tax. Each of four of the larger companies will pay $5,000 a month toward the $50,000. Smaller donations will be made by the smaller companies.

CENTRALIZATION.

As a Republican whose party inherited the early centralization sentiment of the old Federalists, former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, in writing his biography of John Marshall, was naturally in sympatny with the great Chief Justice's desire to strengthen and uphold the Federal government at a time when that government was relatively weak and the State governments were perhaps too srong. But, although approving the "centralization" of Chief Justice Marshall's time, ex-Senator Beveridge realizes that its growth has been so great as now to threaten the very existence of our dual system of government and is now a real menace. In his recent address before the Pennsylvania Historical Society he said that centralization and intolerant minorities are carrying the United States farther and farther away from the standards of freedom and independence upheld by our ancestors 150 years ago. In giving emphasis to his point Mr. Beveridge went so far as to say:

We Americans are now regulated, controlled and suppressed by more legislative acts, bureaucratic rules, and Government interference with every phase of business and life than any other people that exists today, or ever did exist under any form of government anywhere on earth.

How could such a culmination develop out of such a beginning, out of the practically universal sentiment, established after the rise of Thomas Jefferson, in favor of State rights, local self-government and restricted Federal powers? How can it be explained that our dominating element is now disposed to look to the Federal government only and is ready to take orders from Washington in practically every particular? "Perhaps," says Mr. Beveridge, "we have outgrown the American theory and practice of free government," adding with more than a hint of sarcasm: "All this has come about in spite of our free institutions because well-meaning women and men have been and are afflicted by a kind of ecclesiastical complex."

Referring incidentally to the President's recent order for the employment of State and local officials in the execution of a Federal law, Mr. Beveridge said that "if it succeeds and becomes permanent and general it will radically and fundamentally change our form of government and change it at once. To make local officials also Federal officials is in practical effect to destroy our political sub-divisions, or, at the very least, to subject towns, cities, counties and states to a national control centralized at Washington." Such, of course, is the manifest objection to this and other similar expansions of the Federal power, but what do the advocates of "reform", "progress", and "uplift" care about that? The preservation of established institutions based on our dual governmental structure is no part of their plan. They aim only at quick results, and to get these results in all parts of a vast territory at the same time, suggesting the traditional enthusiast who burned his house to the ground in order to dispose of a rat or two that troubled his peace.

Last winter an autograph of Button Gwinnett was sold for $22,500, and the other day two more of his autographs were sold at auction in New York, one for $19,000 and the other for $10,500. The payment of such prices by collectors is due to the fact that Button Gwinnett was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and his signature to other documents is very rare. Gwinnett was both a prominent supporter of colonial rights and a large planter in Georgia, which still has a county bearing his name.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin suggests that "a half-price admission to the half-show now in readiness at the Sesqui-Centennial, to continue during the period of preparation, would be good advertising and promotion policy." But would not this convey the impression that the show will not be ready until it is about to end, thus causing the postponement of visits until autumn?

Treasure troves are not confined to romantic fiction. A big Chinese Buddha, formerly owned by Richard Mansfield, after being sold at auction in Greenwich Village the other day, was found by its new owner to contain a cavity stuffed with manuscripts, coins, tokens and seeming precious stones awaiting valuation by experts.

Booth Tarkington, who at 57 is not as young as he was, refers to the completion of his new novel, "The Plutocrat," as "a very painful job." But "easy writing makes hard reading," and the reverse, which is sometimes true, may reasonably be expected in this instance.

SUNSTROKE AND HEAT PROSTRATION.

A number of years ago we spoke about sunstroke, and heat prostration, as being one and the same thing.

A little thought about the matter teaches us that they are two different conditions entirely.

In sunstroke there is the history of direct exposure to the sun's rays for a certain length of time, then the sudden complete loss of consciousness resulting therefrom. The skin is hot, dry and flushed, the entire body hot, and the pulse strong and bounding.

In heat prostration on the other hand there is the history of confinement in a poorly ventilated hot room. The onset is gradual, and there is not usually loss of consciousness. The skin instead of being hot and dry is really "cold, clammy, and pale." The pulse is really weak instead of full and bounding as in sunstroke.

Further, the after effects of heat prostration are most lasting and serious, as it resembles shock to some extent.

Although heat is really responsible, it is thought that the lack of air, of oxygen, prevents proper combustion in the body and poisonous wastes are retained in the system.

The prevention of heat exhaustion may be helped by a little thought on your part. Loose light clothes, light easily digested food with very little meat, windows and doors open, but shaded from the sun, electric fans if possible, and cool baths.

During an attack of sunstroke the old fashioned method of getting to a cool, shady spot and applying cold cloths to the head is still the best treatment.

In heat exhaustion, more damage has been done, and while you still use the cold cloths or ice pack to the head, hot irons or hot water bottles should be applied to spine and abdomen, and the hands and feet should be rubbed to help the circulation of the blood. Hot drinks of coffee, egg nog, or beef juice are given, if the patient is able to swallow.

If the patient is unconscious the physician will likely use a hypodermic of strychnine or other heart stimulant.

Try to remember then that sunstroke is treated as you have always treated it, but heat exhaustion means usually that you would be wise to have your family doctor on hand at once.

Esperanto on Wireless

Radio has come into the field as a means of spreading the use of Esperanto.

With the co-operation of Radio-Paris, one of the principal French broadcasting stations, the new tongue is to be given voice by wireless for the purpose of gaining Esperanto recruits among the millions of European listeners.

Through the agency of Radio-Paris, a series of 14 lessons is being broadcast, and a prize of 1,000 francs has been offered for the best Esperanto student among listeners.

"And Men Decay"

In a single issue of a New York tabloid we note in the classified ads that one citizen wants to exchange two diving suits, "good for deep-sea work," for a raccoon coat; another would welcome a radio in return for a policeman's hat and raincoat, and a third wants to exchange a muscle builder for a ukulele. Of course there's a young lady who wants lessons in ballet dancing in exchange for office work.—Collier's Magazine.

Shorten Caravan Route

A caravan route from Mohammerah, on the Persian gulf, to Teheran, opened late in the fall of 1925, will save from eleven to twenty days' time over the routes used heretofore. Merchandise from the Persian gulf to Teheran has passed largely over the Bagdad route. The new route, avoiding transit through Iraq, will save not only time and cost, but also the transit charges on merchandise formerly collected by the Iraq government.

A Difference

Another difference between character and reputation is that you can build another character.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

Commodore Decatur, Held in New York Harbor, Runs the British Blockade, June 11, 1813.

During the War of 1812 England was mistress of the seas with her great navy consisting of more than one thousand war vessels.

In May, 1813, the British proclaimed a formal blockade of New York, the Delaware, Chesapeake Bay, Charleston, Savannah and the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Among the American war vessels blockaded in the harbor of New York were the "United States," the "Macedonian," and the "Hornet," under the command of Commodore Stephen Decatur, hero of the war with Tripoli, where, in a daring exploit, August 3, 1804, he burned the frigate "Philadelphia" under the guns of the forts of Tripoli. The "Macedonian" was a prize he captured from the British October 25, 1812, and for which Congress gave him a gold medal.

On June 11, 1813, Decatur attempted to run the blockade and get to sea through the East River and Long Island Sound, but off the Connecticut shore they were intercepted by a British squadron and driven into the harbor of New London. The militia were called out to protect these vessels, and the neighborhood was kept in constant alarm.

The British blockading squadron, commanded by Sir Thomas Hardy, consisted of the flag-ship "Ramillies," of the "Orpheus," "Valiant," "Acasta," and smaller vessels. The commander-in-chief had won the respect of the inhabitants along the coast because of his honorable treatment of them.

The blockade of New London harbor continued twenty months, or during the remainder of the war. Decatur was anxious to run the blockade, and believed it might have been accomplished but for the mischievous, if not treasonable, conduct of a section of the ultra-Federalists known as the "Peace Party."

He had fixed on Sunday evening, December 12, 1813, for making an attempt to run the blockade. The night was very dark, the wind favorable, and the tide served at a convenient hour. When all things were in readiness and he was about to weigh anchor, word came from the "row-guard" of the blockaded vessels that signal-lights were burning on both sides of the river, near its mouth. The lights were of a blue color, and placed in position by treasonable men to warn the British blockaders of Decatur's final movements.

There were "Peace-men" in almost every place in New England, who did all they could to embarrass their government in its prosecution of the war.

So betrayed, Decatur gave up his design, and tried every means to discover the betrayers, but without success. The Federalists denied the fact, but the blue signal-lights had been seen by too many to make the denial of any effect.

In a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, Decatur wrote: "Notwithstanding these signals have been repeated, and have been seen by at least twenty persons in this squadron, there are men in New London who have the hardihood to affect to disbelieve it and the effrontery to deny it."

The whole Federal party, not a few of whom were among the distinguished citizens of New York, traditionally opposed to the war, were often compelled to bear the odium of the bad conduct of the peace faction. They had to do so in this case for more than a generation; and long after that organization was dissolved, members of that party were stigmatized with the epithet of "Blue Light Federalists."

After being bottled up in New London, Decatur took command of the frigate "President," and on the night of January 14, 1815, in the midst of a howling gale, the blockaders of New York harbor having been dispersed by the storm, he put to sea from New York. But the vessel was accidentally run upon a shoal off the eastern end of Long Island, and lost in a desperate fight with the "Endymion," and two other British frigates. Decatur was himself twice wounded in the action.

Commodore Decatur, in 1815, was sent to the Mediterranean with a squadron to humble the Barbary Powers, and to break up a nest of pirates that infested those waters. He captured two pirate vessels, demanded and received the surrender of American prisoners in Algiers, then sailed to Tunis and Tripoli with a similar result. The treaties were made at the mouth of the cannon, and the indemnities demanded were paid immediately. Never has American diplomacy participated in more rigorous and successful negotiations. This cruise gave full security to American commerce in the Mediterranean Sea.

Nutty Natural History

By EUGENE FERGUSON.

THE GREAT SPECKLED QUEENFISHER.

It was in answer to the demands of the leaders of the recent feminist movement that the American Museum of Nutty Natural History organized an expedition to find a substitute for the extremely masculine kingfisher, and after a world-wide search discovered a real queenfisher in existence along the banks of the Congo River in western Central Africa. Its external protective coloring is the most distinctive of all the birds, as it goes in for the more recent and subtle pastel shades. So far it is a mystery as to how the queenfisher keeps its coloring bright and clean after repeated plunges into the muddy waters of the Congo in search of an inferior grade of catfish, on which it lives. It has been noticed, however, that when the water becomes too muddy after the spring rains, the queenfisher desists diving and lives on the small trips it can pick up along the edges of the forest.

A very common variety of acorn is used for the queenfisher's head, and it also possesses a popcorn beak and a clove neck, as well as clove legs. The body is a small English walnut, the wings and feet are split lima beans, and the tail, which acts as a balancer, is an almond kernel. The best way to get the color spots on the queenfisher is to take it to a paint factory and try out everything.

WILL ARRANGE FOR LEGION CONVENTION

Col. Vincent A. Carroll of Philadelphia, national vice commander of the American Legion, was handed a big job recently when the Philadelphia county committee of the Legion named him as chairman of the Philadelphia national convention committee.

As chairman of this important committee Colonel Carroll faces the gigantic task of accommodating any entertaining more than 50,000 American Legionnaires who will attend the eighth national convention at Philadelphia. The Legion national meeting this year will be held in connection with the celebration at Philadelphia in honor of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

To assist in the work, Colonel Carroll selected the following Legionnaires as chairmen of the subcommittees to assist him: J. Borton Weeks, parking; Judge J. Willis Martin, reception and distinguished guests; Miss Anna L. Hawkins, registration and information; Theodore Rosen, decorations; John M. Dervin, transportation; James R. Rose, hotels and housing; James F. Ryan, convention hall and seating; Louis Slepin, badges and trophies; George Wentworth Carr, program; Glendon T. Teague, radio; Mrs. William H. Beister, Jr., auxiliary, and Virgil Baldi, Forty-and-Eight.

H. Harrison Smith and E. B. Holmback were elected vice chairmen.

The Legion meeting this year, October 11 to 15, will be replete with historic interest. Among the historic scenes the visiting Legionnaires will see are Independence hall, the Betsy Ross house, Carpenter's hall, the grave of Benjamin Franklin, Old

Col. Vincent A. Carroll.

Christ church and other memorials scattered throughout the city and its environs from Valley Forge to Brandywine Springs.

Colonel Carroll's service in the World War was significant. He attended the first officers' training camp and was commissioned a second lieutenant. Promotions came to him fast overseas with the Seventy-ninth division, and when he was discharged he wore the gold leaf of a major on his shoulders. He is now a colonel in the reserve officers' corps.

His Legion service began when the Legion itself began. He organized a Legion post in Philadelphia in 1919 and served as its first commander. Since that time he has held various offices in the county and state Legion organization. At Omaha in 1925 his Legion service was recognized and rewarded when his comrades elevated him to one of the highest offices in the Legion, national vice commander.

First Radio Unit Has Been Granted Charter

The first radio unit of the American Legion auxiliary was recently chartered at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Radio Unit No. 300. It is the auxiliary of Radio post of the Legion.

Membership in the unique unit is limited to eligibles who live where there is no live auxiliary unit. It is said ownership of a radio is one of the requirements of membership.

The unit will broadcast weekly meetings and an entertainment program every Monday night from station KFJF (357 meters), Oklahoma City. The unit plans to entertain disabled veterans by broadcasting programs for their benefit.

"Mountain Canaries" Not to Be Molested

Lovers of American "bird" life recently wrote department officials of the American Legion of Colorado protesting the proposed plan of the Legislature of Colorado to carry "Rocky mountain canaries" to the Legion national convention at Philadelphia, October 11-15.

It is understood that the Legislature have agreed to allow the "canaries" of the Rocky mountains—commonly known as burros—to remain in "quarter" in their native Colorado haunts.

Bleaching Linen

The scouring and bleaching of textiles is one of the oldest technical arts of man. Authentic records date back to 300 B. C. at which time the Greek writer, Xenophon, records the wrecking of a ship near Barcelona, the cargo of which was raw linen and the files necessary for its bleaching.

LITTLE HORNED LIZARDS

"Ah," said Mother Horned Lizard proudly, "it is a joy to see the bright little things.

"They don't waste any time.

"They learn so quickly. It is the same here in the zoo as it was out West.

"The children are no sooner born into the world than they scramble and look after themselves.

"That was just the way they did.

"It is the way they are still doing. Either there, or here, they behave the same, the dear, bright, obliging little things.

"Some children must be such a nuisance!" continued Mother Horned Lizard.

"I am so thankful I am a horned lizard mother and that my children are horned lizard children.

"Everyone might not be so thankful to have horned lizard children, but they would be if they were horned lizard mothers! That's the point!

"Yes, I've heard of children who had to be looked after by their mothers and their sisters and their brothers and their daddies.

"Older sisters and older brothers had to look after the younger ones, I have heard.

"And I have heard, too, that children often had nurses who told them to do this and not do that.

"I have also heard that children have had to go to school to learn lessons and what they should know and what they shouldn't know.

Mother Horned Lizard.

"But my precious little ten horned lizards with their nice, smooth, delicate skins, knew what to do right away with no help at all.

"They're my own bright little horned lizard darlings, they are!

"And, oh, what a proud and happy mother I am to have such bright babies.

"What a trouble they would be if I had to teach ten little horned lizards all the lessons they had to learn.

"No wonder there are no schools for horned lizards. They don't need any schools!

"They're bright and can look after themselves almost as soon as they come into the world.

"Can't you, my ten bright little horned darlings?"

And the little horned lizards wriggled and wiggled and said:

"Ah, Mother Horned Lizard, we take after you.

"You're so smart and bright, you know."

Mother Horned Lizard beamed to think of receiving such a compliment from her children.

It was not every mother who received such a compliment.

Oh, they were a happy family indeed, all admiring each other, all able to help themselves, and therefore not a bother to each other.

They never made any trouble for one another.

They were as capable as capable could be.

And Mother Horned Lizard had so much peace and comfort. Oh, she had tremendous comfort.

If she had had to teach her children their lessons she would have been tired out for she knew she wasn't the kind who could teach.

She just didn't have it in her.

And as it was it didn't make a scrap of difference.

"What a joy it is to see the bright little things," she said again.

And the little horned lizards went their ten different ways, looked after themselves in their ten different fashions (which were all very, very much alike) and smiled ten horned lizards' smiles and were happy in ten horned lizards' ways.

Blame Loneliness For Girl's Act

New York, June 11.—Loneliness for her girl chum who had married about a month ago was believed to-day to be the motive that impelled Miss Jean Mac Kenzie, 28, an heiress, to commit suicide in her apartment by drinking lysol. She was the daughter of the late James S. MacKenzie, a large stockholder in the Singer Sewing Machine Company.

Until recently Miss Mac Kenzie had lived in the apartment with Miss Clay Schuyler, a former schoolmate. Recently Miss Schuyler married a naval officer. Since the marriage Miss MacKenzie had seemed lonely and despondent, friends say.

God, make me worthy of Thy land,
Which mine I call a little while;

Falls like a blessing from Thy hand,

DAINTY DISHES

Sometime serve these little biscuits with a lettuce salad; they are good with any other.

Cheese Biscuits.—Prepare the usual baking powder mixture, adding one-half cupful of grated cheese. Cut with a small cutter and bake in a hot oven twelve to fifteen minutes.

Scrambled Eggs With Smoked Halibut.—Lay a small piece of smoked halibut in a shallow dish and cover with milk to remove any excess salt and soften the fish. Shred, and to one-half cupful of the fish prepare the following: Four beaten eggs with one-half cupful of milk, salt and pepper if needed. Melt one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, add the egg mixture and cook. When half done add the halibut and when cooked turn out on a hot platter. Garnish with toast points.

Red Raspberry Lacto.—Take one quart of buttermilk or sour milk, add one egg, the white stiffly beaten, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-fourth of a cupful of raspberry sirup and when half frozen add the juice of a lemon and finish freezing.

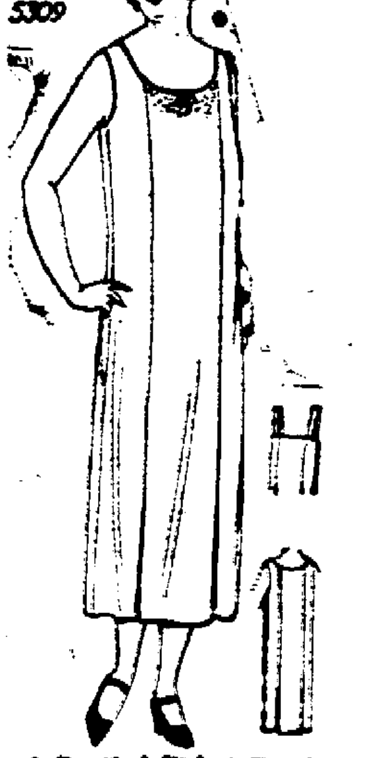

Sardine Biscuit.—Make and bake small baking powder biscuits. Split while hot, spread with butter, add a skinned and boned sardine which has been dipped in lemon juice, then drained, replace the top of the biscuit, heap on plates and serve with tea.

Cottage Cheese With Peanuts.—Mix a cupful of cottage cheese with one-half cupful of coarsely chopped peanuts. Mold in a tablespoon and place in tender lettuce. Serve garnished with a spoonful of mayonnaise.

Seasoned Cabbage.—Cut a medium-sized head of cabbage into quarters, put to cook in boiling salted water with two slices of bacon and an onion which have been cooked together. Cook until the cabbage is nearly tender, then add a few well washed frankforts and serve with the cabbage garnished with the frankforts.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Practical Undergarment.

5309. This comfortable underslip is especially suitable for women of mature figure. It has plait fulness at the front and back seams, providing additional width and comfort in walking.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any person on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Fashion Book Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps to The Freeman for our up-to-date Spring and Summer 1926 Book of Fashions, showing color plates, and containing 500 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Sports Hats Adhere to Rakish, Masculine Silhouette, and Pocketbooks Are More Important Than What They Contain.

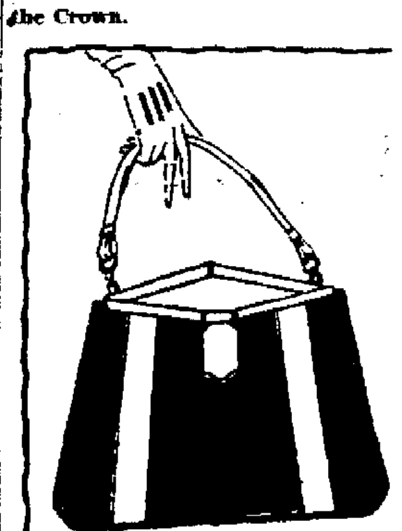

Caroline Reboux whose success in the realm of millinery has been remarkable, is very consistent in advocating a masculine silhouette for the sports hat, and also for the tailored street hat. Her Giglio, her vagabond and casquette shapes are topping the smartest costumes at present, and the latest conceit is the spattered felt, which supposedly imitates the mud-be-speckled felts of the true, wandering vagabond.

These speckled felts come in a variety of color combinations, arrived at through some special process. Rakish lines predominate, with battered crowns and brims that turn up wherever fancy dictates.

In regard to the vogue for huge milan hats, a word or two to the wise may be sufficient. Do not attempt to wear one, unless your height and face and neck warrant it. Such a huge hat is trying to the very short girl, and to the girl whose neck is rather shorter and thicker than she could wish. The popularity of these very large hats is really an amusing development, since one would never have thought that the flapper could take to generous dimensions, either in skirt lengths or hats.

This Little Sports Hat Has Appeared at Biarritz and Is Sponsor to One of the Smart Vogues From Caroline Rěboux. It Is Made of the New Speckled Felt, Shaped Like a Man's Hat in Black, Red and White, With the Brim Stitched at Intervals a Quarter of an Inch Apart and Turned Up or Down to Suit the Wearer. The Crown Is Draped a Little to One Side and Trimmed With a Diamond Snipe's Head With an Onyx Beak. A Narrow Band of Leather Trims the Crown.

A Flat Tailored Pouch of Black Antelope is Trimmed With Bands of Green Calf and Uses the Gilt Band at the Bottom to Match the Extension Frame. Gold Beading Outlines the Bag.

The pocketbook situation is an extremely interesting one. Handbags continue to reflect all of the costume changes, not only in colors but in fabrics. There are quilted chintzes for sports, delicate opal kids for afternoon, and jeweled brocades for evening. Straw embroidery is a popular decoration for the summer pocketbook, tying it up with the straw hat, which is due for a healthy season.

Ate Heavy Meals But Lost Her Fat

One of our stout townspeople told her druggist "A friend in New York sent me a box of the delicious new fat-reducing chewing gum everybody in New York is talking about. She said I could eat heartily and yet reduce quickly. Said it contained a new scientific medicinal and purely vegetable discovery that dissolved fat cells and was perfectly harmless, being free from thyroid and dangerous drugs. I tried it and am already several pounds lighter and have better health. It is called "Slends." So many people have read in the New York papers of the new, quick, safe way to reduce, that local druggists have stocked Slends in large quantities in expectation of a big demand.

The Needed Summer Coat

A Woman May Have a Fine One Now, for

$25.00 to $35.00

The occasional cool days that always occur during the summer months make it imperative that one be prepared with a good-looking light coat—in fact, the smart woman always wears a coat except in extremely hot weather.

Women whose idea of a practical summer coat is one of fine twill fabric (which also can be worn in the autumn), will appreciate these coats, which are handsome ones from our own stocks, now much reduced in price.

They are of charmeen and similar fabrics, in tan, gray, light blue and green tones. They include straight, flared and cape models, most of them fur trimmed, some of them embroidered.

PRINTED SILK DRESSES

For Women of Refined Taste.

$20.00 to $35.00

Many new dresses have just been added to the line of printed dresses at this price, all of which are smart and spirited without being too gay.

They come in combinations of black-with-white, white-with-black, navy-with-black, white-with-navy, white-with-sailor-blue, and navy-with-tan. The patterns include conventional effects, dots and squares.

The styles with jabots and front frills of white georgette crepe are suited to afternoon wear, while there are simple, tailored dresses for shopping and for morning wear at summer hotels. Sizes 34 to 40.

WOMEN'S TAILORED SUITS

REPRICED

$25.00 to $35.00

These suits of twill are in the summer shades, beige, light gray and rose, and in pin checks of black and white. They are short-coat models of fine materials with excellent tailoring and finishing. The range of sizes is quite accommodating.

Literary Note

"The good short story," says a literary correspondent, "is harder to put together than the long novel, which is really nothing more than a series of short stories, linked together. It is easier to market an ordinary novel than it is to place a short story. The latter, to get by, must show snap and ginger from first to last. One editor wrote me: 'A three-line text frequently says more than a three-column sermon.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

PILL-SLAVE FREED FROM CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brought natural relief in a few weeks

A remarkable, convincing tribute is paid Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in this letter from Mr. F. C. Aminsen, of Seattle:

"I suffered with chronic constipation for many years and was compelled to use pills every night, but since I got your Kellogg's ALL-BRAN it works fine. I would not be without it. I was so deathly sick of taking pills every night. Now it is so different. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN works so naturally and is pleasant to take."

F. C. AMINSEN,
Kennyhole, Seattle, Washington.

You can get permanent relief from constipation with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN if eaten regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily—or in chronic cases, with every meal. Doctors recommend it because it is ALL BRAN. It does a job only ALL-BRAN can do. Part-bran products may not do any good at all.

Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with milk or cream. Use it in cooking. Try the recipes given on the package. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek, Michigan. Served by the leading hotels and restaurants. Sold by grocers.

Mercury Non-Magnetic

The bureau of standards says that mercury is one of the so-called non-magnetic elements and cannot be magnetized in the ordinary sense. As a matter of fact it is "dia magnetic" and when placed in a magnetic field carries fewer "lines of force" per unit of area than the space around it. The effect is very small, and very sensitive apparatus is necessary to measure it.

FASTEST CABLE TO SPAN OCEAN

New Strand Will Have Speed Rate of 2,500 Letters a Minute.

New York.—Early this summer the work of laying the world's "fastest" cable will be started. Slipping away from the stern of the ship Colonia a copper strand 3,800 nautical miles long will drop to the bed of the ocean to lie in the perpetual darkness of the depths. By the end of summer all of it will be in place. The shore ends will then be connected and another line of communication will have been established between the old world and the new.

The new line, which will afford direct communication between New York and London and will be the twentieth transatlantic cable, will have a speed of 2,500 letters per minute. It will be eight times as fast as any cable now connecting these two points and considerably faster than the copper strand connecting New York with the Azores, which at present possesses the distinction of being the world's fastest cable.

Like the New York Azores cable the new one will be sheathed in a wrapping of permalloy. This is a new metal whose discovery was the result of the growing demand for speed and more speed in transatlantic communication. As the telegraph companies had long been using automatic devices for sending and receiving messages, the attention of cable engineers was turned to the possibility of improving the cable itself. This resulted in the discovery of permalloy, and made possible the new and improved lines.

Permalloy is an alloy of iron and nickel. Under certain conditions it has a magnetic permeability many times that of any other known substance. In the form of a continuous strip of metal one eighth of an inch wide and six-thousandths of an inch thick the permalloy is wrapped around the 3,800 nautical miles of the copper conductor of the cable. This prevents the leakage of current common to the older types of cable and gives the new line of communication its great speed. While it is not strictly accurate, electrically speaking, to state that the permalloy wrapping increases the speed with which the impulses pass from one end to the other, it makes possible, however, the sending of such sharply defined signals that the intervals at which they follow each other are considerably reduced without overlapping.

Cable Ship Has Right of Way.

While engaged in the laying of this cable the Colonia must proceed in as straight a line as possible and other ships must keep out of her way. A detour of a mile or more might result in the unnecessary laying of two or three miles of cable at a cost of more than $1,000 a mile. The cable ship, furthermore, being attached to the cable is not as free in its movement with respect either to speed or course as an ordinary ship.

When engaged in active duty the Colonia flies the cable sign. This is an internationally recognized signal that the ship is engaged in cable laying and must be given a wide berth by all other craft regardless of their ordinary rights. This sign, which was adopted at a conference of civilized powers, consists of two red canvas globes with a white canvas diamond between them, hung vertically in the rigging. The globes are about two feet in diameter and are hung six feet apart. By night the cable sign consists of lanterns hung vertically, red at top and bottom and white between.

According to international law ships flying the cable sign are supposed to be given immunity in time of war. During the World war, however, the rights of cable ships disappeared. Relying on this presumed neutrality one was fired upon by a submarine during the early days of the war and badly damaged. Managing to make temporary repairs, she was limping into port when again attacked and sunk. During the remainder of the war the immunity of cable ships was purely fictitious.

While cables usually function without interruption, careful records of cable laying are kept so that if any breaks occur in the copper strand it may be picked up for repairs with a minimum of trouble and delay. Cable interruptions can usually be traced to one of several causes. In deep water far from the shore these interruptions are often due to armor decay. The steel protection around the cable becomes rusted, leaving only the gutta percha covering over the copper wire conductor. This protection is subject to chafing and soon the copper conductor comes in contact with the water, is grounded, and communication fails.

Most Breaks in Shallows.

Most of the breaks, however, occur in shallow water near the shore, as there is little to interfere with the smooth working of the cable in the depths of the sea. Near the shore the cable has a host of enemies both animate and inanimate. The worst of these, especially in the warmer waters, is the teredo, the boring sea worm against whose ravages ships' bottoms are copper sheathed and wharf piles are concreted. As a protection against the teredo the shore ends of cables have a layer of brass tape wound about them between the gutta percha insulation and the galvanized sheathing wires.

In northern waters icebergs grounding on shoals often grind the cables flat, exposing the conductor or severing it entirely. Once the carcass of a whale, entangled in many loops of cable, was hauled up by a cable ship. It was evident that the animal's death struggle had parted the cable. At another time the story of what happened to the insulation was told by the finding of a shark's tooth embedded in the cable's covering. Closer in shore cables are often caught by the trawls of fishing boats, which drag the ocean bottom to a depth of 1,200 feet or more. The first international cable, laid from Dover, England, to Calais, France, was picked up by a fisherman who thought he had caught a new kind of eel.

To grapple for a broken cable in the depths would seem an almost hopeless task, yet so carefully are the records kept, showing the exact position of every mile of the cable, and so expert have the cable layers become, that it is an everyday job to pick up a particular section of cable in a depth of two or three miles. The job is always accomplished, although sometimes with difficulties multiplied by storm and cold.

Problems of Repair.

Sometimes in the course of laying a cable, more often when cable repairs are under way, the cable ship is obliged to cut loose and run before the storm for safety. Cable laying is planned in advance for seasons when fair weather may be reasonably expected; cable repairs have to be made when the break occurs, which is more likely than not to be in mid-winter. The cable ship is always prepared to cut the cable and attach a buoy to the severed end, to be picked up again when conditions permit. Throughout the voyage buoys are kept ready, slung in the rigging above the upper deck, with the buoy lines—two or three miles of rope—coiled where they can be used with the least delay.

When a break occurs in a cable it is possible to tell from the shore by electrical measurements and calculations how far from either end the trouble lies. A cable ship then hurries to the spot which is clearly indicated on the chart made when the cable was laid or last repaired.

Having arrived at the place where the cable is to be picked up the cable ship puts over an anchored buoy to mark the point of departure. It then steams back and forth across the line of cable dragging a grapnel which resembles a five-pronged anchor over the sea floor. In shallow water an ordinary grapnel is used. For depths of a mile or more a special form of grapnel has been devised which, when it hooks the cable, cuts it in two and holds one of the severed ends tightly. It is a simple matter, once the cable has been hooked, to splice in a new section and then haul up the other end and splice that on.

"Limpy Joe" Is Mascot of Big Ocean Liner

Round and round the world goes "Limpy Joe," mascot of the globe-girdling Dollar liner President Garfield. "Limpy Joe" suffered a broken leg when hurled against the vessel's wireless antenna during a winter storm last year. Capt. Kenneth Lowry fashioned a rude splint for the injured leg and the gull has stumped the bridge with the skipper ever since. The illustration shows Captain Lowry, the President Garfield and "Limpy Joe."

Dairymen Favor Restriction Bill

Sentiment of 60,000 Dairymen Expressed to Congressman Pratt on Bill to Restrict Milk Importation —Pratt Supports Bill Actively.

Dairymen of this district, as well as of the entire state, were actively behind the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative John Taber of Auburn, restricting the importation of milk and promoting the dairy industry of this country, according to messages received from every dairy center of the state by Representative Harcourt J. Pratt of this district who is also New York's only member of the House committee on agriculture.

More than 135 telegrams, voicing the sentiment of nearly 60,000 dairymen of the state and parts of Pennsylvania, were received by Representative Pratt in two days. The committee on agriculture last Tuesday voted to report the measure to the House of Representatives.

Under the bill, the importation of milk and cream into the United States would be prohibited unless a permit is obtained from the Secretary of Agriculture, and certain restrictions under which the permit may be issued are set up in the bill.

The bill had the active support of Representative Pratt.

SCHOOL DAYS

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE CHANGING TIMES

THAT which was thought to be good and of inestimable value only yesterday, is frequently found unworthy of acceptance today.

In the changing times, today is apt to prove in some particular that yesterday was a blockhead.

Not however in the things whose fundamentals were based on righteousness, but in matters and substances which would not stand the wear and tear of application.

Yesterday is but a reminiscence, much like a blandishing billet-doux, carefully tied with ribbon and laid away to fade and mildew in an oft forgotten hiding place.

In most cases it takes only a light wind to blow us from our anchorage of yesterday and carry us a little farther down stream.

The golden sunlight of today, the colorful flowers, the song birds, and possibly new acquaintances, change the whole trend of our life, unfolding like the blooms under new conditions.

Nor are we the same beings we were yesterday.

Being influenced by present material surroundings, rather than by the Voice of Nature, the great things we had planned to do only twenty-four hours ago, in some way or another do not quite harmonize with the times.

For reasons which we are unable to explain, they seem just a little bit old-fashioned and slightly faded.

The modern cults, the strange lights and the scoffer weaken our resolutions and hold us back.

We wonder whether it was so always; whether our father and mother had similar experiences, or whether they were possessed of stronger wills which enabled them to overcome the yesterdays and face the todays resolutely and move along toward the goal until they arrived safe within its borders.

The difference between us and our parents is not difficult to explain.

They clung through trials and difficulties to the faith of old, while we under the spell of the changing times, defiantly disregard divine teachings and depend entirely on the frail strength of our own, seldom thinking of lifting our faces to the glorious heavens or asking for needed support and guidance.

MY LANDSMAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SENT my ships across the sea
To find some fortune just for me;
Yes, silks and satins I might wear,
And jade and jewels for my hair;
I sent my ships in search of gold,
And ivory, and things of old;
And then, when life was nearly past,
My ships came sailing home at last,
With empty hold.

Ah, now you think that long I wept,
When not a ship with which I swept
The seas of hope came sailing home
From islands far across the foam
With silks and satins I might wear
And jade and jewels for my hair?
And yet, although for gold I yearned,
When empty all my ships returned,
I did not care.

For, while my ships were sailing far,
I met a man—for men there are
Upon the land as well as sea;
And not a salty sailor he,
But just a landsman here at home,
Who never sailed across the foam,
Who never any islands sought,
Nor jade nor jewels ever brought,
Nor cared to roam.

And yet my landsman, strange to say,
Although he never sailed away,
Yes, just a landsman at a desk,
Unsung perhaps unpicturesque,
Has brought my heart a greater store
Than any ship from any shore
Could ever bring—has brought me this:
His arms around me, and his kiss,
Forevermore.

Oh, maidens, you who maybe sigh
For golden ships as well as I,
A ship's a most uncertain thing;
Perhaps the fellow who will bring
You love and laughter and delight
And gems and jade forever bright
Is just a fellow full of fun,
Is just some fellow like the one
Who calls tonight.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

WASHING TOGETHER

IF TWO persons wash their hands at the same time it is a sign that they will be friends forever. Or, as they say, "Wash and wipe together; live in peace forever." When Henry VIII wished to show to his courtiers the friendly terms upon which he and Cardinal Wolsey stood, he caused the cardinal to wash his hands with him in the golden basin which was presented his majesty for purposes of ablution after dinner. Seeing the king and his great chancellor washing their hands at the same time in the same basin convinced the courtiers that the rumor of their falling out was all "bosh," and that the king and cardinal would be friends forever.

The charm did not work in the case of Henry and Wolsey, but the ceremony spoken of was a very ancient one, indicating a lasting friendship between kings and those whom they honored, or with whom they were binding a treaty. The intimacy of the act and the ostentatious manner in which it was frequently performed doubtless had a great deal to do with impressing upon the populace its significance of lasting friendship and in making it the immediate ancestor of the popular superstition of today.

But back of that lies the mystic qualities attributed to water by primitive man as an ultimate source of the generation of life, and the veneration in which the hand was held as a distinctive mark of man's superiority over the brute and as the agent of his intellectual processes. Two men washing their hands together in the same water generated a similarity of life in thought and action which produced a lasting friendship.

RADIO

Morris S. Strock of the Government Radio Laboratory Has Designed and Built an Apparatus to Measure Frequencies of Stations.

With short wave radio transmission now emanating from practically every corner of the earth, a tremendous interest in this form of communication is being predicted for this summer.

According to the most recent list of the world's short-wave stations there are approximately 130 transmitters operating on regular schedules on wave lengths between 13 and 115 meters. The total is expected to be almost doubled by the end of the year.

United States Leads.

The United States maintains the lead in the short-wave stations, principally through its naval transmitters and the experimental stations of the low-wave pioneers among the radio manufacturers. General Electric company, A. H. Grebe & Co., the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, the Radio Corporation of America together operate practically one-fourth of the high-frequency plants.

Included in the list of stations on low waves are transmitters located in Germany, England, Java, Sweden, Holland, Russia, France, Hawaii, Samoa, Canal Zone, the Philippines, Japan and aboard the ships of the United States fleet scattered throughout the world.

In addition there are many others operated by amateurs who have received experimental licenses to broadcast within the low-wave bands assigned for that type of work. Through co-operation of the International Radio Amateur union, which was created last year, the low-wave communications, both in code and voice, are being relayed extensively throughout the world.

"Radio Boat" Experiment.

Among the interesting experiments to be undertaken soon in short-wave transmission is the "radio boat" to be launched by the Grebe company, and which is expected to cover the Bermuda races, not only for short-wave receivers but for broadcasting by the higher wave stations.

The extent to which the short wave is being used for re-broadcasting in other parts of the world was shown recently in the announcement by the General Electric company that a scheduled relay of a program for the annual agricultural show of the South African Union was received clearly and re-transmitted. Included in the two-hour program was an address by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and a concert from Schenectady.

Parallel Tubes Reduce Impedance; Aid Output

In various set building experiments going on there appears to be an inclination toward the use of parallel tubes, that is, two tubes with their grids connected together to the input and their plates connected together to the output circuit.

In studying this type of tube connection it must be borne in mind that the push pull combination is not a parallel tube arrangement. It is more of a relay system. One tube takes up the signal when the other lets go.

In connecting two grids together both grids are at the same voltage at the same time. Both plates, being connected together, are at the same voltage at the same instant. But an essential in smooth action is that both tubes must be alike, which seldom happens. It is the same situation with a team of horses. Unless they are matched there will be a difference in the work they do.

System That Reduces Impedance and Improves the Output.

Aside from these considerations, putting the input circuits in parallel cuts the input impedance to one-half of its value. Likewise, plate circuits in parallel cuts the output impedance to half value. In the output circuit, therefore, to match the tube impedance, the transformer or choke or resistance would naturally have one-half the impedance it had when matching a single tube. In other words, smaller chokes and smaller primary inductances will give better results than the high values, assuming the latter to be correct for a single tube. But another way, the cheaper types which do not give such desirable effects on a single tube should be better on the parallel tube.

Tube Insurance That Is Worth Remembering

Probably many tubes are burned out every year by accidentally connecting a high-voltage "B" battery across their filament terminals. There are many ways to prevent such an accident from happening, and one of the easiest is to connect a high resistance in the negative lead to the "B" battery. An ordinary 10-watt electric-light bulb is one high resistance which may be used for this purpose. If the use of the lamp causes a howling noise to be heard, shunt it with a 1-mfd. condenser.

ETHER WAVES

Never touch the inside of a set when it is in operation.

The most common source of trouble within a radio set is in the tubes or in the sockets.

The direction in which the antenna points affects the loudness of the signals received.

An aerial is not essential with a sensitive set employing two stages of radio frequency amplification.

When using the variocoupler as a single circuit set reverse the tickler connections if it will not oscillate.

Coils for high frequency currents should always be wound with nonmagnetic material, preferably copper.

The ground is one of the most important portions of the radio circuit.

Crystal detectors operate as long as the detector is in good condition.

Excessive resin from solder can be removed with alcohol and a soft cloth.

If a listener is bothered by having the station programs fade the cause may be with the aerial of the receiving set. If the antenna becomes loose and swings in the wind it will often cause weak signals.

America's Importance in Great Radio Field

Until radio became a part of American communication service, this country was, in effect, reliant upon foreign countries, especially in time of war. Since radio has been developed, however, the United States has taken its place in the sun, so to speak, and within the last six years has, through its private and public enterprise and initiative, given America direct communication with Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Poland, Sweden, Norway, the Argentine, Japan, Java, Hawaii, Brazil, Chile, the Philippines, China, French Indo-China and Australasia. The American radio "network" is comparable only to the cable network of Great Britain.

Radiation Different From Regeneration

Many people have the mistaken idea that regeneration means radiation, or vice versa. This is not true. Regeneration and radiation are not synonymous, and should not be confused.

A radio set may contain regeneration in its circuit without offending by radiating. On the other hand, a so-called nonregenerating receiver may be, and frequently is, a most violent offender from radiation. A radio set radiates—sometimes improperly called "reradiates"—when the tube directly or magnetically connected to the antenna, oscillates and causes the antenna likewise to oscillate and give off energy.

Radio Transformers

If distortionless amplification is desired the transformer in the first stage of audio amplification should not have a ratio greater than 3:1. The second stage transformer should have a 3:1 ratio.

Buddhists Educating Women

Officials of the Buddhist sect of Buddhism have at last decided to educate their women. They have established a woman's university in Tokyo at a cost of 1,000,000 yen. The schools will be ready to operate in 1927, according to present plans.

CITY TREASURER'S OFFICE
Special Assessment.

Notice is hereby given that I have received the warrant for collection of the special assessment of 75 per cent of the expense incurred in the construction of a Sanitary Sewer in Reynolds Street, commencing at a point in the center of said street, said point being opposite a stone monument set in the ground at the angle point in said street, thence through the center of Reynolds Street for a distance of about 290 feet to a connection with the existing sewer in Wynkoop Place.

The Same has been left with me for collection at my office in the City Hall, in said City; that for thirty days from the date of this notice the said assessment may be paid without additional fees or charges, and that for the twenty succeeding days two per centum additional will be collected.

If any of the said special assessment shall remain unpaid at the time last mentioned, I shall give a written or printed notice to the person or persons against whom such assessment stands charged requiring them to pay such unpaid assessment to me at my office within thirty days thereafter, with five per centum fees thereon and one dollar for such notice as required by the City Charter.

Dated at the Treasurer's Office, City of Kingston, N. Y., June 5, 1926

HARRY S JACOBS,
City Treasurer.

Six Cardinals Visit New York

New York, June 11.—Six cardinals of as many nations, headed by John Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate to the Twenty-eighth Eucharistic Congress to be held in Chicago, will be greeted by thousands of New York Catholics today. Scenes of splendor surpassing any pageantry in the history of Catholicism in this city, will attend the visit of the princes of the church.

Cardinal Hayes will go to quarantine to greet Cardinal Bonzano, who will arrive in New York on the Aquitania. With him will be Ernest Cardinal DuBois, Archbishop of Paris and Primate of France; Gustave Frederick Cardinal Piffl, Archbishop of Vienna and Primate of Austria; Henry Cardinal Reigy Cavanova, Archbishop of Toledo and Primate of Spain, and John Cardinal Czernoch, Archbishop of Strigenia and Primate of Hungary. The party includes one hundred churchmen.

Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, will arrive today on the President Roosevelt. Accompanying him with be Archbishop Harty of Cashel, Bishop McRory of Down and Connor, Bishop McNeely of Raphoe, Donegal, Bishop Downey of Ossory, Bishop Doorel of Elphin, Bishop Morrisroe of Achonry and several Irish priests.

Divorce Pends

Mrs. Mary Wrenn Garland, who approved when her husband refused a legacy of $1,000,000, sued Charles Garland for divorce in Barnstable, Mass., charging infidelity. Garland is in jail in Allentown, Pa., on charges growing out of a "love colony" there.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

PRINCE OF OPTIMISTS

THE Optimist club was sitting around the camp fire. The ruddy glow of the flames lit up their rubicund faces, and ever and anon their jolly, outbursteous laughter would awaken the echoes in the woods about them.

The question came up—which of all their long line of presidents had been the greatest optimist? A vote was taken.

Loffenby Serious was our most optimistic president," spoke up Grinsen Giggle. "He was so optimistic that he used to try to catch trains by the time on his wrist watch."

"I nominate Million W. Smiles," cried Reliable Buoyant. "Million W. Smiles was so optimistic that he married a poor widow with six small children and a goat on a salary of $20 a week."

"I nominate Silver D. Lining," said Freely Guffaw. "Silver D. Lining, our present respected president, is so optimistic that he has been arrested for counterfeiting Russian money."

With great enthusiasm the club voted for Silver D. Lining.

SUNDRIES

A SMALL amount of meat which has been left from a previous meal will, with a combination of vegetables, make a most wholesome main dish.

Chop Suey.

Cut into half-inch cubes any leftover cooked beefsteak, add a half cupful of cut-up onion to every cupful of meat and cover with water, simmer slowly for half an hour, then add two to three cupfuls of celery cut into small pieces, continue cooking, adding seasoning and simmer for another half hour or more. Add two tablespoonfuls of chop suey sauce and serve in a mound surrounded by hot, well-cooked rice. Fresh round steak may be used for this dish, frying brown, adding the onion and letting it fry before adding water.

Chili Stew.

Take one and one-half rounds of steak, put through the meat grinder. Heat one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of olive oil, add six tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, four cloves of garlic and fry until a light brown. Add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of worcestershire sauce and three teaspoonfuls of chili powder, mixing well. Place the meat in a deep frying pan and almost cover with water, cook for fifteen minutes slowly, then add three cupfuls of canned tomatoes and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Blend one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour with a little of the tomato juice and add to the stew. Bake in a casserole one hour and serve with boiled rice or noodles.

Creole Chicken.

This dish may be prepared the day before and reheated for serving. Cut up a good fowl, cover with boiling water and cook five minutes, then simmer in a fireless cooker or on the back of the range for half an hour. Cook two cupfuls of canned tomatoes and half a bay leaf for fifteen minutes, then strain. Chop one small onion and cook in three slices of bacon diced, until the onion is yellow, cook the bacon until brown before adding the onion, add the chicken, tomato, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two red and two green peppers cut fine, and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Boil five minutes, return to the cooker and cook until the fowl is tender. When ready to serve thicken the sauce with flour and serve very hot.

Broiled Mushrooms.

The delicious field mushroom, after brushing well and removing the caps, should be placed hollow-side up on a broiler, add a teaspoonful of butter to each cap and broil under gas. Usually if large it is best to cook them on the other side first, then turn over, add butter and finish cooking. Chop the stems and fry in butter.

Turkish Women Dancers

The Turkish national dance, the Zebek, has been reformed to include women participants. This wildly vivacious peasant dance has been performed for centuries by men only, the forms differing in different parts of the country.

The creation of one form from the many dance variations as well as the introduction of women dancers, have been effected by Selim Sirri Bey. He has studied folk-dancing throughout Europe. His two daughters are accompanying him on his tour of lectures throughout Turkey and are demonstrating the newly reformed Zebek. They are the first Turkish girls to take up dancing professionally.

Moot Talks to Y's Men Club

The Y's Men Club held a very interesting meeting Wednesday evening and although they had to compete with the circus and the various other activities which seemed to be prevalent, they had a very good attendance.

After the supper, William W. Brady, Jr., who was chairman of the evening's program, introduced the Rev F W. Moot, pastor of the Congregational Church, who gave a very forceful and interesting address on the "Proverbs of Life," making the same especially applicable to the life of the members of the club. Among the many points in his address he especially stressed that it was the little things in life that count, impressing upon the members that it was the little acts of service which would build the club into a really strong and powerful organization, and not to overlook the importance of the small things. All the members expressed the hope that they could have the Rev. Mr. Moot with them again.

The next regular meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at the Y M. C. A at 6:15. Lester Finley will provide the entertainment and a large attendance is expected.

Old Mexicans Masters of Horticultural Art

Not only the gardens of Montezuma but the picture writing of his subjects prove the ancient Mexicans to have been great horticulturists. Their descendants still use their complex system of botanical names, a system which conveys information as to qualities, characteristics and habitat of many plants.

Wilson Popenoe, formerly of the United States Department of Agriculture, in a paper on "Plants of Astec Picture Writing," gives a long list of botanical figures used in Astec hieroglyphics. The flower symbol recurs constantly in all sorts of combinations as a place name. Maize, an important feature in all Indian life, appears frequently, along with the sweet potato, the black bean, the cherry, plum, avocado and various less-known native fruits. Most interesting is a combination of the water sign with the conventionalized sign for cultivated ground, meaning "place where the land is irrigated." The familiar desert features, the yucca, the cactus and the mesquite, are all represented, but the gem of Mr. Popenoe's collection is the picture symbol which, directly translated, means "flea pepper," a fitting name for the biting, red-hot pepper of the Southwest.

The floating gardens of Mexico City, so famous during the conquest, may still be considered one of the best expressions of the native horticultural art. Willow trees are planted in the shallow water of Lake Xochimilco in plots varying from 200 to 2,000 square feet. Their interlacing roots form a sort of basketwork that holds the soil with which the plots are filled, while their tops are kept pruned so as not to shade too heavily the plants cultivated on the islands. The inhabitants of Mexico City are supplied to this day with vegetables, corn and flowers raised on these esthetic truck farms.

Teaching His Sweetheart to Swim: Don't be afraid, dear, I won't let you go under. . . . Take it easier, dear, you work too hard . . . . No, of course I don't mind you grabbing me around the neck when you get strangled . . . . Gee, but you look good in that one-piece bathing suit . . . That's right, now you're catching on. . . . No, I'm not a bit tired. You're light as a feather. . . . Did you say you have a cramp in your foot? Hold it up here and let me rub it. Is that better, 'dear? . . . Now, let's try again. . . . Atta girl! 'Just a few more lessons and you'll be able to outswim me . . . . Sure, we'll come again tomorrow night

Teaching His Wife to Swim: Say, I didn't come out here for you to hang on to. . . Yeh, I know I promised to support you, but don't remind me of that now. I want to enjoy myself. . . . Get your feet off the bottom. . . No, your head won't go under. It's not heavy enough . . . For goodness sake, stay under the water. That suit's a mile too small for you. I know it's last year's suit, but I didn't realize you had gotten so fat. . . . What in thunder did you strangle for? I didn't push you under. I just turned you loose. . . . Come on, now, start over again. . . . Work your feet I know they're big, but maybe you can manage 'em. If you work your feet half as hard as you do your tongue you'd be a champion. . . . No, I'm not fussing at you. What gave you that idea? . . What's that? A cramp in your foot! Oh, hell, let's go home. . . .

A woman who has had a husband in the state penitentiary for about five years is evidently getting lonesome, for she has written to the governor as follows: "Please, your excellency, let him come home, if for no other reason than to see his six children which have been born since he left."

Three Roman pitchers have been dug up at Doncaster, England. So that game didn't originate in America after all.

On Thinking

Thinking is a very dangerous business. Particularly if we believe what we think. It will lead us to do things which we may later regret. Or it will lead us not to do them, which we may regret even more. It makes for investigation and analysis—for dissection and probing—and it is not long before we begin to detect flaws in those very delights that we once believed to be perfect. We may even go so far as to discover hopeless errors in ourselves. Then, disillusion sets in—disillusion that threads its subtle way into the contentment of our lives and spreads with lightning-like rapidity. Soon it is too late to do anything but submit. We are lost in a sea of ideas. Thinking, like love, is a game without rules. We strongly advise against it.—Exchange.

Character in Mythology

Phaon depicted in "A Reading From Homer," was a deformed boatman of Mytilene. He was famed for his chivalry. Once an old woman asked him to ferry her across the sea, although she could not pay her fare. When safely across the sea the woman gave the kind ferryman a box of ointment, telling him to rub the contents on his misshapen shoulders. When he did so, Phaon was changed to a handsome young man. Venus, in the guise of the old woman, had wrought the miracle. Soon Phaon and Sappho became lovers.

Origin of "Tabloid"

The word "tabloid" was arbitrarily coined by Burroughs, Wellcome and company of London, England, and applied to a preparation of drugs in a concentrated and condensed form. Although the term is a copyright trademark of this firm it is now widely used to designate anything concise or condensed, as tabloid newspapers.—Exchange.

THE COHENS AND KELLYS

IT SEEMS THERE WAS AN IRISHMAN AND A JEW—And George Sidney played the Irishman and Charlie Murray played the Jew. No, it's the other way 'round, but anyway with the help of Vera Gordon as the Jewish mamma they contrive to make "The Cohens and Kellys" the finest and funniest comedy characterization imaginable. It's rare entertainment made for laughing purposes only—and you'll laugh and laugh.

Nothing could be funnier than The COHENS and KELLYS

Who squabbled over a million dollar legacy and gave birth to over a million laughs.

It's a welter of tears and a mirthquake of laughter when the Cohens become Kellys and the Kellys become reconciled and the picture becomes the grandest and merriest comedy characterization that ever rippled the silver screen.

Firemen Rang False Alarms

Visiting Firemen in Port Jervis Kept That Department on the Jump With Series of Six False Alarms Wednesday Night — Jokers Discovered.

A series of six false alarms during Wednesday night kept the Port Jervis fire department on the jump, and the would-be-jokers—out of town firemen—were rounded up by the police and later discharged with a severe reprimand.

The visiting firemen kept the Port Jervis fire department apparatus rolling noisely about town for fires that did not exist. Then, after a night-long vigil by fire alarm box guards, who were relieved at daybreak, two more false alarms were turned in. The Port Jervis police discovered that the guilty ones were a number of out of town firemen. No charges were preferred and after a stiff reprimand they were let go. Their names were not disclosed.

The big firemen's parade that brought the annual convention to a close started promptly at 2 o'clock that afternoon in Port Jervis and was one of the largest parades held in some time. Kingston was represented by three fire companies. There were about three thousand firemen in the parade and it was marked by one fatality when a seventy-year old man, a member of the Beacon City Band, died before the parade started while seated on a church lawn. Death was due to heart failure.

Excelsior, Cordts and Rapid Hose Companies, who took part in the parade, arrived home from Port Jervis at 9:30 o'clock Thursday evening and made a short parade headed by their bands through the streets and were welcomed by a large number of people.

Foreman Dies Of Suffocation

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 11.—One foreman died of suffocation and twenty were overcome by a fire which caused a loss estimated at $150,000, in the central business section of the city today.

Al Eyrman, 40, was the man killed. After manning a hose for an hour in a doorway he staggered to the sidewalk and collapsed, dying while being rushed to a hospital.

Seven of the other victims are in hospitals, but with one exception, no further fatalities are expected.

The blaze, starting shortly before midnight, was one of the most stubborn in the city's history because of the dense smoke.

Nine business places were damaged by the smoke, water and flames.

Banker's Life Not So "Easy and Carefree"

A friend of a prominent Los Angeles banker was kidding him about the easy and carefree life a banker leads. The banker replied:

"Oh, yes! Quite so—

"On Monday two of my customers went into bankruptcy, netting the bank a tidy loss. During the afternoon I explained to the directors why I had lent these customers the money with which to bankrupt.

"Tuesday afternoon I took my weekly lesson in the fine art of shooting the bandit before the bandit had a chance to shoot me. I left, convinced that nowhere was a bandit safer than before my gun.

"Wednesday evening was given over to a lecture by a prominent criminologist on the most up-to-date methods of bank swindlers. It left me with great confidence in my fellow men.

"Thursday I attended the funeral of one of our messengers who had been shot while delivering a pay roll. His mother's grief made my evening a sweet dream.

"On Friday I attended a dinner at which the principal speaker announced that only bankers of America could work out the salvation of Europe.

"I devoted Saturday to the filling out of my customers' income-tax returns.

"Today is Sunday and this is a pleasant sanatorium."—Los Angeles Times.

Chairs Tore Stockings

The wheels of justice were stalled at Atlantic City. It all happened when one of the women jurors discovered a hole in her stocking. The jury box is not inclosed and she had no way of hiding the rip. Then she noticed another "juress" in like trouble. There was whispering, and a third started to blush when she found a long gash in the back of one of her stockings. The court noticed the three women did not have their minds on the case and made inquiries. The difficulty was explained, and when it was found that raw-edged bolts on their chairs were responsible for the stocking rents court was adjourned until new chairs could be substituted.

Flying Safety Device

By means of new inventions air pilots are able to steer safely to a given point in the thickest fog, Flight Lieut. H. Couch has informed the Royal Aeronautical society of England. By means of delicate instruments in the cockpit a pilot is kept automatically informed when he is within 1,300 feet of the ground, and the loss of every foot of height as he descends is also indicated. Other instruments show the aviator just what part of the airdrome he is over, after he has arrived in the vicinity of his destination, so that he may land in safety, though he may not be able to see the ground until he has actually alighted.

Despatches From Foreign Parts

London, June 11.—Bangs, divided into five points, are the latest innovation of coiffures. One point comes down to the middle of the nose, two points come down to the eye-brows and two more sweep across the forehead. Ear-curls generally accompany the bangs.

Moscow, June 11.—Possibly to make sure that none of this summer's polar expeditions has removed the red flag from Wrangel Island, a Soviet aeroplane is planning a flight to the island this month. The Naval Flier Kalvitz, accompanied by two mechanics, will make the flight in a German Junker plane. The fliers will explore other Siberian Islands.

Vienna, June 11.—Dan Cupid is up against a housing shortage. Due to the fact that couples contemplating marriage can not find living quarters the Vienna marriage rate is fifteen per cent below normal.

Dover, England, June 11.—Aspirants for the channel swim are becoming alarmed over repeated reports of man-eating sharks being sighted in the channel. Numerous sharks have been reported this season, harassing fishermen and bathers.

Tokio, June 11.—Mrs. Tsuruko Maruta, 80 years old and crippled through injuries sustained in the great earthquake, was told by a fortune teller that she would live to be 90. Unable to endure the thought of ten years more of suffering, Mrs Maruta drank dyro-chloric acid and died.

Britain Protests Action of Soviet

London, June 11.—Great Britain has sent a strong protest to the Soviet Government of Russia, condemning the action of the Soviet Government in permitting money to be sent to England during the recent general strike on grounds that such funds were calculated to be used to secure a change in government and foment revolution.

The note states that Russia's attitude makes future negotiations, either political or commercial, between Great Britain and the Soviets extremely difficult.

The text of the note will not be published until it has been received in Moscow, but may be released tomorrow morning.

In view of the fact that the funds, which were sent from Russia and refused by the Trades Union Congress during the general strike, eventually reaching the striking coal miners, it is understood that the British Government will send a supplementary note protesting against Russian interference with any British industrial dispute.

Has Complete History of Spanish Mantilla

At last I have found the trail, Francis Miltoun exclaims, in exultant mood, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Some years ago browsing in the archives of Palma in the Island of Majorca I came across a document which professed to give the history of the Spanish mantilla. Lately it turned up again among a mass of notes. The Spanish mantilla was originally a mark of shame for the femininity of loose morals of the day, a day away back before Goya and the Spanish painters took it out of its class and made it an appertenance of the dress of the ladies of the court.

Originally the mantilla crossed its rather straggly ends of the time down over the breast in the form of a letter A. These bretelles were red. One wonders if Hawthorne ever knew this. There's the plot ready made. One and another of most modern and ancient writers went and took what they wanted where they found it, a procedure which is ethically legitimate up to a certain point.

It should be remembered that the mantilla of today resembles very little that of the fairylike Island of Majorca, where the sun ever shines and the thermometer never falls very low. By a process of development it came to be what it is, but it was always a headdress. I put it that way, not being a fashion writer, but I vouch for the rest of the statement as supported by documentary evidence and only recount it here by the possibility of being able to drag in Hawthorne. That happens to be vivid in my mind because in my youth I once lived across the street from the House of Seven Gables. How the circles do cut in on one another, like those of the planetary system!

Herring Is Bread

What is to become of the people who live on the islands of the Zuyder zee in Holland when that sea becomes dry land? Pierre Van Paassen asks, in the Atlanta Constitution. As far back as human memory goes these people have been fishers. The sea is in their blood. "Herring is bread," as they say themselves. From their very youth their whole life is directed toward the sea. "Only idiots and fools stay on dry land," a wrinkled old skipper told me once. The little gamins in their wide trousers can hardly walk when they fashion a ship out of an old wooden shoe, fix it up with rudder and sail and float it on the ditch. When they come from school they first must see the harbor. Is there a trawler running in or a tugboat they shout: "Did you see father?" and "How much of a catch did he have?" Fish and the Calvinist sermons of the pastor are their life and breath. The Dutch government, it is said, will compensate them. Nevertheless it all means the end of a picturesque race. And it will be just as hard to make landlubbers out of these children of the sea as it is for Russia to make Jewish merchants into farmers in Crimea.

College for Engineers

To supply trained engineers, especially for the automobile, motorcycle and bicycle industries, a technical college will be established at Wolverhampton, England. The total cost of construction will be about $400,000, of which one-third is to be paid by the county of Stafford and the remaining two-thirds by the city of Wolverhampton.

The buildings will be divided into five sections: (1) general and administrative, (2) biology, (3) commercial, (4) domestic, and (5) technical, comprising engineering production with workshops and drawing offices, material section, including chemistry, metallurgy, and general science subjects, mechanical and electrical engineering, and building construction.

It is intended to make provision for evening as well as day students.

Bromine From Sea Water

The strangest ship that ever sailed the seas left Wilmington, Del., recently on one of the strangest voyages that ever a ship sailed. This ship called the Ethyl, is in reality a great floating chemical laboratory, equipped to extract the element bromine from sea water.

Bromine is a raw material useful in medicine, in photographic and motion pictures, and in the manufacture of the ethyl fluid used in motor fuel. Through the last use of the world's supply the chemical has become greatly depleted, and the voyage of the Ethyl is the first step in an elaborate plan to find other sources of supply.

Monster Steam Boiler

The largest steam boiler in the world is being put in in Pittsburgh, Pa., by a heating company. There are six miles of four-inch steel tubing in the heating and condensing apparatus, with a heating surface of about three fourths of an acre. The boiler is rated at 3,000 horse power by the ordinary system of rating, but is capable of operating continuously at three times this capacity and for short periods at four times this rate. When at full load it evaporates 200 tons of water an hour.

Trains Negro Preachers

Each summer for seven years a negro preachers' institute has been held at Bettis academy, in the sand hill country of western South Carolina. Last year's attendance included 200 preachers and 190 teachers, and they spent four days in intensive subjects, under the leadership of Dr. James H. Dillard, president of the Jeanes and Slater funds.

Tagging Major League Bases

The Pirates gave Lee Meadows a nine-run lead to work on, but the Phils knocked him out of the box, tied the score and then won the game 13 to 9 shoving the Buccaneers out of first place Clarence Mitchell held the Pirates scoreless for six innings

Cincinnati crawled back inside the pearly gates by defeating Brooklyn, 4 to 3, after a long losing streak Luque yielded only five hits while the Reds drove Barnes to the showers.

The Braves, who are giving Boston fans something to cheer about for the first time since 1914, whipped the Cubs, 8 to 4, for their eighth straight win Benton was hit hard but clamped down like a hard-hearted landlord in the pinches.

Flint Rhem of the Cardinals chalked up his tenth victory of the season at the expense of the Giants, 3 to 2, with the aid of sensational catches by Douthit and Mueller and weird base running by the Giants Douthit and Kelly contributed homers.

Detroit gracefully bowed to the Yankees, 8 to 1, for the third time in succession. Lazzeri and Meusel hit for the circuit and Pennock yielded but five hits.

John Picus Quinn of the Athletics waltzed home to a 6 to 0 victory over the White Sox

The Senators came to life and nosed out the Indians in the ninth, 5 to 3

The St Louis pitchers failed to deliver anything except passes—ten of them—and the Browns lost to the Red Sox, 8 to 3.

ALL STARS PLAY THE MECHANICS SATURDAY

Saturday afternoon the All Stars and Mechanics will battle it out on the Athletic Field at 4 o'clock. Both clubs will be on their toes to outdo the other. The Mechanics although only organized this season, have showed up to have a real ball club. In their two out of town games they were defeated by but one run, one game going twelve innings. The All Stars have also been going good this season, and a snappy game should result.

The Mechanics will have their hand on the job. This should also be a feature not had at every ball game.

The Junior Order has North, Bush and Cavaitz to pick from to do the twirling. Freddie Stoudt will be on the mound for the All Stars.

Early Politician

The Buckeye Blacksmith was the nickname of John W. Bear of Zanesville, Ohio. He came into prominence during the campaign of 1840, and was a sensational orator of the Whigs. His nickname was derived from the fact that at his initial appearance at the ratification meeting at Columbus he appeared in his blacksmith's clothes.

Record Crowd Expected Sunday

At Kingston Fair Grounds When St. Louis Plays Colonials—No Advance Sale of Reserved Seats—Seixas Will Umpire.

Lou Brown and Hugh McTague, owners of the Kingston Colonials expect things to go ace high as far as the attendance is concerned at the St. Louis Cardinal-Colonial match at the Fair Grounds Sunday afternoon. The bars will be let down at 1 o'clock and before the game gets underway at 3.30 o'clock the local owners expect 3,000 people in the ball park.

The biggest crowd that has ever been in the park at one time turned out in 1923 when the Colonials played Philadelphia Twenty-seven hundred went through the gate before that match and the local management expects the park to be even more crowded this Sunday.

No Advance Seats.

There will be no reserved seats on sale until Sunday The fans will not be able to purchase reserved seats until they have entered the park This is done in order to give everybody an equal chance to procure a seat. Those who are in possession of season tickets will have their places held for them Notice of the big league match has appeared in twenty-four newspapers of the state and the local owners have turned down requests for reserved seats from Catskill to Newburgh and consequently expect the park to be filled to its capacity Sunday.

New Umpire.

Harry Seixas has been secured to umpire the game Sunday Seixas who is president of the Interstate Umpires' Association of New York, performed in this capacity for the locals during their 1922 season. Emil Beale of Poughkeepsie who was to have handled the match is not available because of business duties.

Fiery Thatch Makes Any Hockey Player Popular

Joe Vila, sports writer, says that the value of a red head to an athlete was illustrated once more during the visit of the Queen's college (Ontario) team to New York A young man named Legon, who plays on that team, has a shock of fiery hair and the minute he glided out on the ice the crowd spotted him—and liked him.

Legon is a splendid player—one of the best in amateur hockey circles, yet on a team of the caliber of Queen's he did not stand out particularly, except in the affection of the crowd. The first time he darted in pursuit of the puck in the Princeton game there was a cry of "Come on, Red" from the crowd and the cry was repeated every time that he went into action thereafter, which was so often as to be almost continuous

The other Queen's players thrilled the crowd as they flashed behind the puck toward the Princeton goal, but none thrilled it quite as much as "Red."

When "Red" scored a goal the spectators were in an uproar and when he was ordered from the ice for a bit of rough stuff, toward the end of the game, the official who penalized him did not escape without a few lusty "boos."

Athletics Pitcher Lost Nineteen Games in Row

Two Macklan moundsmen had an exceedingly tough season in 1916. They were John Nabors and Thomas Sheehan. Nabors lost 19 straight games; Sheehan 16

That was the year the Athletics dropped 20 in a row, one of the worst losing streaks on major league record The Macks ran into 117 defeats that campaign, the highest number an American league club ever sustained.

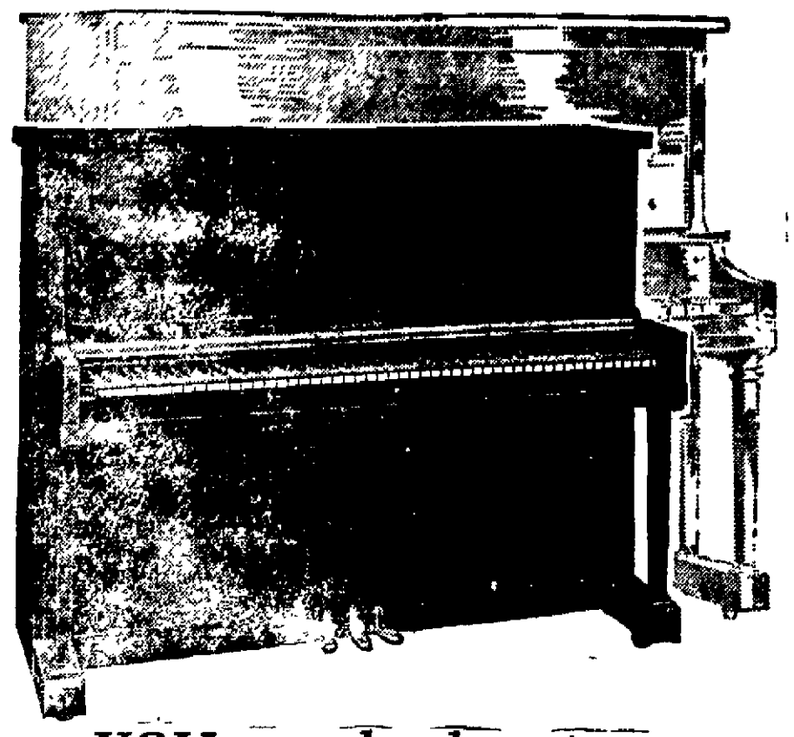

But two seasons before the Macklan brigade had copped its third flag in four chases Minus Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and some of the other famous stars, however, the Quakertown club took a terrific tumble, from which it didn't recover for seven seasons.

Rejected, Now Star

How would you like to reject a promising recruit, and then later be forced to pay from $50,000 to $100,000 for him? This was the sad experience of Manager Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals with First Baseman Bottomley (shown in the photo). Several years ago Bottomley was called to St. Louis for a tryout, and forgetting his baseball shoes, he equipped himself with a pair much too large for him, which made him appear very clumsy to Rickey. Rickey sent him to the minors, and after three years heard such glowing reports of his playing that he paid a large sum to get him back, and today he is one of the outstanding stars of the St. Louis Cardinals

Germ "Boom"

In London you can get a bargain in germs. A quarter of a dollar will buy millions, and you can have your choice of more than 2,000 kinds

There has been a great demand for germs lately from laboratories and hospitals, according to Popular Science Monthly, and workers in the Lister institute are kept busy feeding, raising, and bottling them to ship to the far corners of the earth

Many of the germs are cranky boarders, and the chef has to make special dishes for them A favorite food is beef tea, but others will touch only dishes in which eggs are used Those in the assembly demand alcohol in their foods.

Some of the germs demand a lot of coddling. The "flu" germ, for instance, has to be kept at a certain even temperature in an incubator night and day lest it catch cold and die.

A Bum Shot

With the opening of the golf season old stories of the links are revived.

Here is one which Harry Schopp, professional at the South Grove municipal course, tells of a man who was attempting his first game:—

"I started him in on a short, easy hole," Schopp explained. "And by some lucky chance he sent the ball straight off the tee, on to the green and it finally dropped gently into the hole.

"The man made no comment as we proceeded to tee up for the next hole. Again he struck the ball fairly and it sailed straight away for the next green, rolling well on to it.

"But the player seemed irritated instead of properly astonished. He scratched his head and muttered:

"'Humph, by crackj, I missed that one.'"—Indianapolis News.

Embarrassing Question

Willie Jane was attending a vaudeville show with her mother the "head liner" appeared in all her glory, reclined upon a chaise longue, and began to sing a beautiful love ballad. All was so quiet you could hear a pin drop when Jane spoke up, loud and clear: "Oh, mamma, don't you wish you was nice like that lady?"

Schillings Won Deferred Game

After the schedule game in the Industrial Baseball League had been called off Thursday evening the managers of Schillings and the Standard Oil communicated and arranged to play a postponed game of Wednesday, June 2. Schillings won the game, 13-3.

"Steve" Connelly, erstwhile Colonial, was on the mound for Schillings, and he proved to be too much for the Socony boys, striking out fourteen, and allowing but four hits. He also contributed two hits, one a three-base knock.

Schillings started to get their runs in the first inning, scoring three. Hicks and Weeks walked and scored on Williams's and Connelly's singles. Didzik reached first on a fielder's choice and scored when Cragan lost Corregan's throw at second.

The second inning the Furnituremen put the game in the bag, scoring four runs. They hit Corregan in every inning, getting three runs in the third, one in the fourth, and one in the fifth. They scored one run in the last inning off Cragan, who had replaced Corregan in the sixth.

Cragan hit a triple to start Socony's second inning and scored on Williams's grounder to Hicks. Bradley was safe when Hicks dropped a throw from Williams. Miller singled, and Robinson doubled to left field, scoring Bradley and Miller. It was Socony's best inning and the only inning they scored.

SIDE-LINERS.

Connelly has quite a strike-out record. He fanned 26 batters in two games, which is not bad for seven-inning games.

Cragan did a little strike-out work himself, getting six of the Da-bedmen in two innings.

There wasn't a put-out in the outfield, but the Socony outfielders weren't idle, and I don't mean perhaps.

"Jazz" Hicks on first base put a lot of pep in Schilling's infield. He also started their first rally.

Schilling's scouts must have keen eyes, for they got a find in Tomaseski. He got two doubles and a single.

Due to the misunderstanding of the game, Artie Rice, the official umpire, could not be located. Freddie Stoudt, of Connelly, was imported to do the calling.

Tonight we will have Uni-Slyke and Joe Long's Railroaders with us.

Last Night's Fights.

At New York: Paul Berlenbach, light heavyweight champion, outpointed Young Stribling, 15 rounds.

Jack McVey, New York Negro welterweight, won from Sailor Friedman, Philadelphia, 10 rounds.

Sergeant Sammy Baker, welterweight, defeated Red Herring, Guilford, Mass., 10 rounds.

Monte Munn, Lincoln, Neb., heavyweight, stopped Joe Burton, Dallas, Tex., in the first round.

Birds That "Drum"

The biological survey says that the ruffed grouse is the bird which produces the drumming sound. Partridge and pheasant are both terms applied locally to ruffed grouse, and in that sense it may be said that both the partridge and pheasant produce such sounds. The ruffed grouse is called partridge in the North and pheasant in the South.

Stribling Made Poor Showing

After Fourth Round in Bout in Which Paul Berlenbach Retained His Light Heavyweight Title—Fourth Round Took the Starch Out of the Challenger.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 11.—Maybe they'll say the boy is good, now; maybe this hard boiled old town with a soft boiled intellect will accept this lad for what he is and forget the prejudice that usually is the hallmark of ignorance; maybe the man responsible for the first "boo" that rent the air two years ago remained to give the first cheer last night when Paul Berlenbach retained his light heavyweight title at the end of fifteen funny rounds with Young Stribling, the Georgia challenger.

The rounds were funny only if one had a keen sense of humor. The writer unfortunately had none and seemingly he shared this distinction with 50,000 others, who paid $210,000 for the privilege of being aggravated.

"Hey, Stribling, you win the hugging championship of the world at all weights," shouted a $20 come-on in the fourteenth round and he called the turn with admirable accuracy. Stribling either wouldn't fight, or couldn't and, for all of me, it made no difference which was the case. Berlenbach could and did. That tells the story.

Stribling started well, taking the first round by a shade and stayed with the pace through the next two. But in the fourth he welcomed a left hook with his abdomen and later two stunning lefts to the jaw and, after that, Young Stribling as a challenger was all washed up.

He tin-canned the rest of the way, never again taking a chance of any kind, unless you wish to count the fact that he didn't jump over the ropes. He had made one mistake in trying to mix with a killing hitter in the fourth round and he apparently is not the young man to repeat such a grievous error.

But he might have tried to box at long range; instead he did nothing and kept on doing it until the infuriated customers lashed themselves into a high dudgeon.

Several times, particularly in the fourth and tenth rounds, he was rubber kneed from punches on the chin but he was in there to stay and that was the best thing he did.

Whether Stribling was affected by his unusually low weight of 171 pounds or the illness of his wife, or both, cannot be estimated, off-hand, but whatever it was, he committed professional suicide in this town. They don't mind seeing a man lose but they dislike to see him die without his boots on.

Stribling looked lean and drawn as he sat in his corner but he came out for the first round like a race horse and, poking his left into Berlenbach's face easily earned honors, meantime taking the champions leads on his elbows and shoulders. It looked like good business up to this point and so did the second and third rounds where Stribling got at least an even break.

He started the fourth with a beautiful left hook to the jaw but Paul merely blinked solemnly and walked in with a left hook to the body that doubled Stribling like a folding camera. Following up his advantage, the champion rained lefts to the body and head and finally cocked his man on the jaw with two lefts that had him ready for the big tumble. He managed to last the round and, finding this to be a rather healthful suggestion, decided to make it the meat of his tactics from then on.

He came out for the fifth with a left and right to the chin but Paul swarmed all over him with lefts and took the play away immediately. It was so, also, in the seventh, eighth and ninth and in the tenth. Berlenbach again had him weaving from a left hook that nipped his jaw. Stribling knew he was beaten then, if he didn't know it before, which is a point that is open to earnest argument. Anyhow, he did all the rest of his leading with his lowered head, his arms being occupied with Paul's waistline. The remainder of the fight was like that and is hardly worth the telling. I won't.

McGraw Signs for Three Years

Despite his long and active service, John McGraw has signed to manage the Giants for three more years at a $35,000-a-year salary. McGraw also draws pay as vice president and dividends as a club stockholder. This is McGraw's twenty-fifth season as manager of the Giants. Since assuming the helm in 1902, he has piloted the team to twelve pennants and three world's championships.

Dogs Able to Impart Ideas to Each Other

Every dog owner must have wondered at some time just how far dogs can go in communicating ideas with one another. Evidently one dog can entice another to follow him and perhaps vaguely assure him of a worthy project, but it is doubtful if he can explain the exact purpose of their expedition. As Lloyd Morgan puts it: "A dog may be able to suggest to his companion the fact that he has found a worrysome rat, but can any dog tell his neighbor the delightful time he had worrying a rat the day before yesterday? I imagine that a dog can tell his neighbor what we symbolize by the simple expression, 'Come!'"

More than one story has been told of a little dog going to seek the aid of a big dog friend to come and help fight a third dog, too large for the little dog to whip unaided.

Old Badger frequently comes to me and, by nudging me with his nose and walking rapidly away, makes it plain that there is some place he wants me to go with him—usually, some place where there is food. If he can thus communicate with me there is no reason why he shouldn't communicate with dogs as well.

Even aside from sign language, dogs seem to be able to impart ideas in unmistakable terms. When driving with Badger in an automobile, and we pass other dogs, most of whom bark at him, he ordinarily pays little heed to them. But an emotional dog—and I have one big black dog especially in mind—feels something at him, evidently of an obscene nature, that irritates him beyond endurance and he tries his best to jump out of the car to defend his honor. I have wondered many times what it could be that a strange dog says to him which so infuriates him.—"Tom and Your Dog," by Fred O. Kelly.

Effective Advertising

The traveling salesman was telling the other fellows in the pullman smoking compartment the reason why his uncle in Cleveland had the most prosperous shoe-shining stand in a block dotted with footgear polishing emporiums.

"My uncle's advertising got him the business," he said. "He had a big sign reading, 'Our shoe polished daily.'"—From the Penny Ante Club, by Philip Revell.

NEW PALTZ.

Monday, June 14, will be a great day in this village, for then Hope Temple, No. 80, Pythian Sisters, will have as their guests those attending the district convention, which will be held here on the above date. The following Temples will be represented: Saugerties, Tannersville, Ellenville, Pine Bush and Kingston. The committee on arrangements have been working hard for some time to make the affair a big success and have about completed all arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors. About 250 delegates are expected for the convention which will be a one day session, afternoon and evening. There will be an open session in the afternoon starting at 2:15 and lasting until 2:45, at which time the regular business session will begin. The evening session will begin at 8 o'clock. It is hoped that all brothers and sisters of Hope Temple will be present as this is the first convention of its kind to be held in the village. Deputy Sister Mrs. John Spinneweber, one of the first members of Hope Temple, has worked very hard for the lodge since it was instituted in 1923, and the members are asked to give her their loyal support and help by their presence at the convention and to help entertain the visiting delegates.

Society Notes

Crosby-Linster.

David S. Crosby and Miss Mildred Emily Linster were married at Seward on June 8. The bride a few years ago was teacher of the fourth grade in the Main street school at Saugerties. After leaving that village she studied nursing and graduated from the Long Island Medical College in Brooklyn.

Crapser-DuBois.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Bessie DuBois and John R. Crapser of Newburgh, formerly of Staatsburg, N. Y., on Wednesday, June 9, in New York city by the Rev. George W. Grinton, former pastor of Grace M. E. Church, Newburgh. Attending the bride were Mrs. Elsworth M. Logan of Walden, N. Y., and Mrs. Charles M. Baildon of Newburgh, Charles M. Baildon being the best man. Miss DuBois is a daughter of the late Elkanah and Mary DuBois of this city and a sister of Mrs. Emma Dickerson and Fred DuBois of this city.

About the Folks

William Hanley, who has been seriously ill of pneumonia at his home on Franklin street, is recovering under the care of Dr. John F. Larkin.

Miss C. Watson of Hudson motored to Kingston Wednesday with a party of friends and enjoyed luncheon at Blue Stone Inn, 67 Wurts street. They returned home after an enjoyable afternoon.

THE JOINERS.

News of Interest to Members of Fraternal Societies.

On Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock Court Santa Maria, Catholic Daughters of America, will hold initiation.

The Degree of Pocahontas will hold its regular meeting this evening at its rooms, Broadway and Brewster street.

Fascisti Bars Swearing

Fascism is out to suppress swearing. This news is contained in a letter which the new secretary of the party, Turati, has written to the central committee against blasphemy of Verona. "Your aim," writes Turati, "is contained in the program which the fascist party has traced for the moral improvement of the nation." It is interesting to recall, however, that a large part of popular Italian oaths are not strictly blasphemous in the Christian sense, since they refer to pagan gods and are direct descendants of the oaths of Julius Caesar and Caligula.

Growth of Corn

The bureau of plant industry says that one single kernel of corn produces as many as four or five stalks. Each stalk is attached to a separate root system.

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 11.—While the leadership of the forward movement in stock prices today remained with United States Steel and General Motors, the response of the balance of the industrial stock market was more pronounced than in the four previous sessions of the week, and, after early irregularity, the whole market moved up buoyantly to higher price levels. Steel sold at 134½ against 122½ last week. General Motors rushed up to above 136 on unusually heavy trading, in which blocks of 500 to 7,500 shares changes hands.

Many of the laggard stocks were brought into line today, the list including the low-priced rails, the oils, equipment and coppers. The advances were moderate, but the volume of trading was larger, transactions exceeding a million shares before the end of the third hour.

The movement in American Can, General Electric, Combustion Engineering and various pool specialty stocks gained momentum today. Heavy trading in American Can accompanied the rise of that stock to above 49, while Combustion Engineering recovered about four miles of its recent losses. Allied Chemical, Universal Pipe preferred and Cast Iron Pipe sold higher.

EVANGELIST ROBIE DRAWS BIG CROWDS.

Robie is the popular evangelist now conducting a community campaign in the Reformed Church at Rosendale. He is a gifted young man who plays the trombone, sings and preaches. The church auditorium is filled every night. An orchestra from Kingston will play at tonight's service. Some new and special feature is given every evening. On Wednesday night a bus with a large number of young people representing the Clinton Avenue Epworth League attended and notice had been received of other bus loads who are coming. No one goes to sleep in these meetings and weariness takes its flight. Every one is invited regardless of church affiliation. Services begin nightly at 8 o'clock.

Legion Prize Flag Presented to School No. 7

Eighth Grade Pupils, Who Won American Legion Contest, Receive Flag at Morning Exercises With Appropriate Ceremonies—Legion Members Give Good Advice.

With appropriate ceremonies, the American Legion prize flag was presented this morning at assembly to the 8th grade of School No. 7, the winners of the American Legion Flag Code Contest, in which the thirteen public and parochial schools of Kingston participated.

The ceremonies were opened by Franklin P. Coons, principal of School No. 7, who introduced Eugene B. Carey, commander of Kingston Post, who gave an interesting and inspiring talk on the significance which the flag holds for the American Legion.

C. J. Heiselman, chairman of the American Legion committee on education and Americanism, then congratulated the winning class on their excellent work and on having such a splendid teacher as Miss Anna Van Buren whose great interest and splendid efforts, combined with the scholarship and patriotism of her pupils, insured the winning of the prize flag. Mr Coons received his share of congratulations and commendation, also.

Walter J. Miller, on behalf of Kingston Post of the American Legion, then presented the prize flag to the winning class. Mr. Miller, in a glowing address, gave the flag into the custody of the class and asked that they ever guard, protect, cherish and revere the Stars and Stripes and all those fine and wonderful things for which it stands.

The American Legion committee on Americanism and education was also represented by Percy S. Jones, Past Commander George W. Potter and Everett V. K. Schutt.

The ceremonies were brought to a close by the singing of patriotic songs.

The honor and glory of winning the second annual American Legion Flag Code Contest goes to School No 7. Which school will win next year's prize flag? That is a question many of the school children of Kingston are asking themselves. Next year's victor will depend largely on the zeal and interest and hard-work exhibited by pupils and teachers. Merely wishing for it won't bring it. It means work, and hard work.

The contest this year was very close and many of the schools showed a fine improvement over what was done in last year's examination. Many of the classes have pledged themselves to study hard and win next year's prize, and no doubt the results will be surprising.

Some Weather Signs.

It is not always easy to tell what the weather is going to be, but a few signs are very reliable. When it is raining you will sometimes notice that the sky starts to clear in the form of an arch. Close to the horizon you can see the little half-circle which is the beginning of the arch that will sweep across the sky until there are no clouds left. Then you may be certain it is not going to rain again for some time. Look at the clouds at almost any time of the day, and if these get smaller or remain about the same size, rain is not likely. Should the clouds get bigger, expect showers soon. In fine weather the wind increases up to midday and then gradually dies down. If the wind does not get less after noon, and still more if it blows harder towards sunset, you may be almost sure bad weather is coming.

Imitative Japs.

From Japan comes a pleasing variation of our vivid slang "high hat" we have heard. "High pockets," of less easy connotation, has its clientele. In "An Immigrant in Japan," a book by an American girl who lives as a native, and has written of her experiences under the name of Theodate Geoffrey, the author tells of her shock on seeing her hitherto totally proper Japanese butler answer the door clad in undies only. To her remonstrances the butler showed an American ad of familiar athletic gentlemen against a background of locker-room elegance, clad only in that easy deshabille of primary and essential garment. Grinning, the Jap said, "Me new clothes all same as American boy. Very high karu!" "High karu," it appears, is Japanese slang for "high collar."

Radio Possibilities

The immeasurable possibilities of radio are indicated by the fact that an amateur broadcasting station in Garden City, N. Y., station 2GY, recently carried on two-way communication with another amateur, 8CCQ, at Braymer, Mo., using only 0.04 watts in the plate circuit of the transmitting tube. This feat represents 30,000 miles per watt. If radio messages could be radiated as efficiently as this through the universe, a station of 100 kilowatt rating could be heard more than two and a half billion miles away.

HARD SURFACED ROADS GROWING

Like motorists who ride over them, hard-surfaced roads get "tired" and require periods of rest that they may recuperate. Prof. S. S. Steinberg of the University of Maryland, assistant director of the highway research board of the national research council, has discovered.

"Considerable attention is being given to determining the causes of cracking in hard roads," said Professor Steinberg. "The extent of cracks in a slab is dependent on the underlying soil, the quality of the material used and the loads the pavement must bear. When a vehicle passes over a pavement the slab is deflected. The result is that under traffic the road is subjected to a wave action, the slab rising and falling with each passage of a wheel. On roads under heavy traffic at high speeds this motion may be repeated many hundred times an hour.

"Experiments simulating these field conditions result in the discovery that the material is subject to fatigue, which, in many respects, is similar to muscular fatigue in human beings. After continued rapid application of load the normal elastic properties are overcome and the fatigue limit is reached. The result is a break and the appearance of a crack in the road.

"The similarity to muscular fatigue is further evidenced by the fact that if before failure it is permitted to have long periods of rest it recovers its ability to resist the applied forces, and the fatigue limit, or life of the slab, is extended."

A recent improvement described by Professor Steinberg is a new kind of cement which gives greater strength in 24 hours than is developed by the ordinary cement in 28 days. This opens up remarkable possibilities in hurrying road construction.

Money Spent for Roads Excellent Investment

We of Minnesota are still jangling over the bankrupting sums of money that are being apportioned for highway construction—that is, some of us are, says the Hibbing News. Others realise the fact that money spent for good roads is like laying money away in the bank—only that good roads pay interest that would soon bankrupt the strongest bank on earth. And at that, this great, rich, glorious state of Minnesota is spending but a tithe of what some states are putting into new and better highways. We get up on our hind legs and fairly screech when a twenty million dollar road bond issue is proposed, while the fifth rate state of Florida thinks nothing of spending two hundred and twenty million dollars for road building. Minnesota can better afford to spend a sum like that than Florida can, and it is more than either Florida or Minnesota really need to keep a highway system even with the times. Give Minnesota a hundred millions to spend on roads and it will get more real value out of it than Florida can out of five times that amount. Today Minnesota stands third in the number of tourists received in a season, even with its lack of roads. But that cannot be accepted as an excuse for not spending in full keeping with the wealth and importance of the state.

Federal Aid Restricted

Federal aid in road building is bound by two considerations: First, that the type of road to be constructed with government aid must meet with the approval of the director of the bureau of roads; and second, that help can be given only on such roads as have been designated interstate. The same rule in purpose holds with respect to state aid to counties. Only intercounty roads receive state aid or are built by the state outright.

Good Roads Hints

It is said by research workers that motorists save annually $1,[illegible],000 by the use of [illegible] miles of gravel and hard-surfaced roads in this country.

Panic Follows "Black Hand" Cry

Sixty Public School Children Injured In Melee Which Follows "Black Hand" Alarm—Boy Saw Three Suspicious Looking Men.

New York, June 11.—Sixty public school children were injured today, two severely, when 2,500 boys and girls gathered in the playground before assembling in their classes, were thrown into a panic by a cry of "Black Hand!"

Vincenza Di Riossi, 9, and Nicolo Nevella, 9, were taken to a hospital.

The cry was uttered by two of the boys. In the rush for exits by the entire attendance, many children were trampled.

Shortly afterwards, the school was besieged by parents of the children and police reserves were called to quell the disturbance.

When the cry was raised some of the classes had already filed into the school. These children retraced their steps into the surging crowd of startled pupils, boys and girls tripped and fell down the stairways and hundreds of children were tangled in the melee.

Teachers tried without success to restore order.

A number of the children ran through the streets of the district spreading the "Black Hand" rumor and turmoil ensued as the residents believed the false alarm. The district is almost wholly Italian.

The two injured children were taken to the hospital in a police patrol as the authorities believed the sight of an ambulance might create further fears.

School was dismissed for the day by Principal Reily.

Frank Alevia, 12, a pupil, told police that he saw three suspicious looking men standing near the school entrance. It was said that the same men had been seen a week ago, and police believe that this may have caused the "Black Hand" alarm.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Michael Hogan, formerly of Glasco, died in Brooklyn on June 9. The remains will be interred in St. Mary's cemetery, Saugerties, on Saturday.

Ruby Smith, wife of Aubrey Lawrence, died at the home of her father, George Smith at Granite, N. Y., on Wednesday, in her 28th year. Funeral from the M. E. Church at Kerhonkson Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock standard time. Interment in Pine Bush cemetery, near Kerhonkson.

Mrs. Ella J. Rogers, widow of George A. Rogers, who died May 29 at Whitestone, L. I., was a former resident of Napanoch. She is survived by a son, George, and two daughters, Mrs. William Hopkins and Mrs. W. B. Hamlin of Whitestone, and a sister, Mrs. Rachel Tullius, of Stamford, Conn. She was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Clara Winslow of Ellenville.

Kaziah Priscilli Carman, aged 57 years, died at her home in Napanoch on June 6. She was born in Greenfield, the daughter of William Travis and Catherine M. Schoonmaker, and in 1867 she married Stephen Carman at Mountaindale. She is survived by three daughters and two sons, William H. Carman and Mrs. Arthur Smith of Ellenville, Mrs. Russel Krom, Katherine Carman and Harry Carman of Napanoch, and one sister, Mary M. Rogers of Goshen. Funeral services were held Tuesday with interment in Pine Bush Cemetery.

High Falls, June 11.—Mrs. Rachel Depuy, a long time resident of High Falls and widow of the late Louis Depuy, died at her home here on Sunday morning after a lingering illness. Mrs. Depuy was 78 years of age and is survived by one niece, Mrs. Egbert Pindar of Newburgh, N. Y. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Reformed Church of which she was a member and was conducted by the Rev. Thomas S. Braithwaite assisted by the Rev. Mr. Agnew of St. John's Church. Interment in Kyserike cemetery.

Mrs. Mary Ann Comfort, aged 73 years, died at her home in Ellenville on Wednesday, June 9. She was born in Spring Glen, the daughter of John Lynch and Margaret Laughlin, and married Richard Comfort about forty-three years ago. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Walter Wehner, of New York; one son, James, of Hoboken; a sister, Mrs. Margaret Gray of Ellenville, and a brother, James Lynch of High Falls. Funeral services Saturday morning at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's Church, Ellenville. Interment in the old cemetery in that village.

Mrs. Sarah Stoddard Norbury, one of Ellenville's foremost philanthropic and public spirited citizens, died at her home on Warren street, Ellenville, on June 6, aged 90 years. She was a daughter of Phineas Stoddard and Marilla Fair, and in 1856 maried Dr. John F. Norbury. Most of their married life was spent in New York and after Dr. Norbury's death she made her permanent home in Ellenville. Surviving are a nephew, Zadoc Stoddard of Los Angeles, Cal., Floyd Stoddard of Monticello and Frank Stoddard of Pennsylvania, both grandnephews, Mrs. Milton Terwilliger of Ellenville, and Mrs. F. Stratton of Monticello, and Mrs. John Smith of Long Island, grandnieces, also survive. Funeral services were held Tuesday with interment in Woodlawn cemetery, Ellenville.

Phrase Often Misused

The phrase "estates of the realm" is often erroneously applied in England to the king, lords and commons. It is properly given to the lords, the clergy or spirituality, and the commons. These three orders, together with the king (or queen), constitute the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain.

In France the three orders were the nobles, the clergy and the third estate (or commons), and these remained until the revolution of 1789.—Kansas City Star.

Found Dead in Bed at Pine Hill

Richard C. Hill, who had been a resident of Pine Hill for many years and had made his home with Mrs. D. J. Hunt was found dead in his bed early Thursday morning. He was taken ill last November and was confined to his bed for several months, but during the past few weeks he had so far recovered as to be on the street and Wednesday he was out and appeared as well or better than usual. As he did not appear at his usual time Thursday morning, Mrs. Hunt sent to his room and found him dead. Deceased was about 74 years of age. The cause of death is supposed to have been heart failure.

POULTRY

HIGH COST OF HATCHING EGGS

It costs $1.06 to raise a leghorn chicken from the time the egg is set until the bird is six months of age. This was revealed by the class in poultry management, conducted by Prof. L. F. Payne, head of the poultry department at the Kansas State Agricultural college. The class recently completed a problem on the cost of hatching eggs and rearing the pullets to maturity.

The cost for hatching 100 chicks was based on the following items: Eggs at $5 a hundred, fuel at 45 cents, labor at 68 cents, interest on investment in incubator at 66 cents, depreciation 65 cents, tax 26 cents, making a total of $10.27. The cost for running the machine for three hatches was figured at approximately 10 cents for each chick.

The cost for brooding and rearing from the time the chickens were hatched to six months of age includes interest, depreciation and tax on the houses, brooders, drinking fountains, fencing, feeding hoppers, supply hoppers, self-feeders, and also such items as straw, fuel and labor at 25 cents an hour, totaled $54.66 for 100 chickens.

Feed consumed by the 100 chickens until they were six months of age amounted to 2,215 pounds of grain and mash, and 1,706 pounds of milk. The food cost of the chicks for the first 12 weeks was 20 cents a chick, and for the last 12 weeks it was 41 cents. This brought the total feed cost of 61 cents for each chick and $1.25 for the entire expense account of each of the chicks from the time the eggs were set to maturity of the chicks at six months of age. Deducting from this the income from the broilers and cull pullets, the total cost for each pullet matured was $1.06.

Feather Eating Caused by Idleness and Feeds

Feather eating is often caused by idleness and lack of something in the ration which the birds crave. Overcrowding in a small poultry house brings the birds in close contact with each other and may start the habit. One of the best remedies is to turn the hens out on range, where they will separate and become interested in other things.

One poultryman reports that feeding a little raw ground bone each day seems to satisfy the bird's appetite and they stopped picking at each other. Feed a balanced laying mash and plenty of green feed. Scatter the scratch grain in straw litter so the hens will keep busy. If only a few hens have the habit a short observation of the flock may locate the offenders and they can be isolated.

Clean Poultry Quarters Necessary for Success

Thorough cleaning of the poultry house every few days is absolutely necessary if the flock is to be kept free from disease. Not only infectious but lice and mites develop under unsanitary conditions.

Cleanliness means not only a general sweeping out, but it means cleansing with boiling lye water and it means painting the inside of the building with a good disinfectant paint which will serve the double purpose of improving the appearance as well as making it sanitary.

Unless you are willing to keep the poultry quarters clean and sanitary you cannot hope to have very much success except by accident.

Sour Milk Is Best

Sweet milk is not advised in the chick's ration. Chicks do not handle the milk sugar to the best advantage, and changes from sweet to sour milk cause digestive disorders and should be carefully avoided at all times. As it is difficult to keep sweet milk from souring in the fountains near the warm brooder stoves, it is best to give only sour milk, or buttermilk, to chicks. The lactic acid in the sour milk seems to help in retarding bowel trouble and keeps chicks healthy and growing.

Green Ducks for Market

There are two sources of income from ducks—the sale of green ducks at the age of about ten weeks, and of eggs, both for hatching and commercial purposes. Ducklings grow rapidly and they can be made to reach practically their full growth at ten to twelve weeks. This means a very intensive feeding program. Those who keep a small farm flock will find it profitable to separate those which are to be forced for market and keep them in a separate pen.

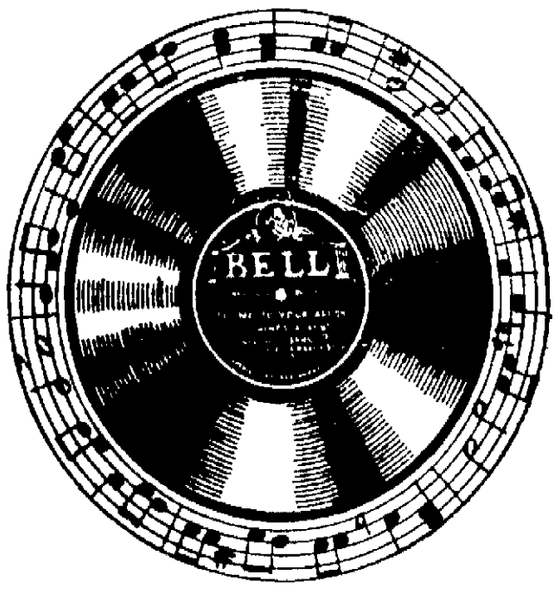

Remedy for Leg Weakness

Leg weakness is not a disease but is usually a condition brought about by faulty feeding and lack of sunlight. The feeding of cod liver oil or the exposure of the growing chick to direct sunlight will usually prevent this trouble. Cod liver oil when fed to growing chicks, should be fed at the rate of about 4 per cent of the total ration, and there is very little danger of overfeeding cod liver oil. Many start feeding it when the chicks are two or three days old.

Many Use Elevators

The elevators of New York city, it is estimated, carry more than 5,000,000 passengers daily. This is said to be larger than the number of riders on street railways, subways and electric lines.

Grundy Advanced Pepper-Fisher Funds $408,000

Grundy Testifies He Loaned $300,000, Contributed $18,000 and Signed $90,000 in Notes to Pay Watchers—Pepper Said $125,000 Was Spent in His Behalf.

Washington, June 11.—Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, loaned $300,000 to the campaign committees of Senator George Wharton Pepper and John S. Fisher, the gubernatorial candidate, in the the senate "slush fund" committee recent Pennsylvania election, he told today at its inquiry into the charges of corruption in the recent Pennsylvania senatorial primary.

This sum, Grundy said, he loaned on notes to the Republican citizens' campaign committee of Philadelphia, which handled the Pepper and Fisher campaigns in the eastern half of Pennsylvania.

In addition to this, Grundy said he signed a note for $90,000 on the Corn Exchange Bank of Philadelphia with W. H. Folwell, treasurer of the citizens' committee, to pay "Pepper and Fisher watchers" at the polls in that city on election day.

Contributed $18,000.

Grundy further testified that he had personally contributed $18,000 to the same campaign fund. In all, his testimony showed, he was responsible personally for giving $408,000 to the Pepper-Fisher funds.

The $300,000 which he loaned the committee, Grundy said, included money advanced before and after the election. He said about $150,000 had been advanced before the election and about the same amount "after May 14, the election day."

$90,000 to Pay Watchers.

Under further questioning, Grundy said the "notes" were merely signed by W. H. Folwell, the treasurer of the committee. He admitted there was no guaranty that he would ever be repaid.

"You just have a complete faith in the people of Pennsylvania that they'll come forward and pay you back?" he was asked.

"Yes."

Grundy's testimony came after an hour of futile questioning.

The "break" occurred when Grundy said he had signed the $90,000 notes with Folwell to pay watchers at the polls.

"Who were the notes drawn on?" he was asked.

"I forget them the most," Grundy said suddenly.

$125,000 Says Pepper.

Senator George Wharton Pepper's "Pepper-Fisher Campaign Committee" spent $125,000 in seeking to secure his seat in the senate, he testified today at the senate's "slush fund" investigation into Pennsylvania's alleged $5,000,000 senatorial campaign.

Pepper's declaration that $125,000 had been spent by his own committee lifted the cost of the Pennsylvania primary into the "million-dollar" class.

The admitted expenditures now total $537,000 with one half of the state yet to be heard from.

Governor Gifford Pinchot told of spending $195,000. Representative William S. Vare reported $71,000 in personal expenditures while W. L. Mellon, nephew of the secretary of the treasury, testified his "Pepper-Fisher" Committee spent $266,000 in Western Pennsylvania alone.

168 Rebels Slain.

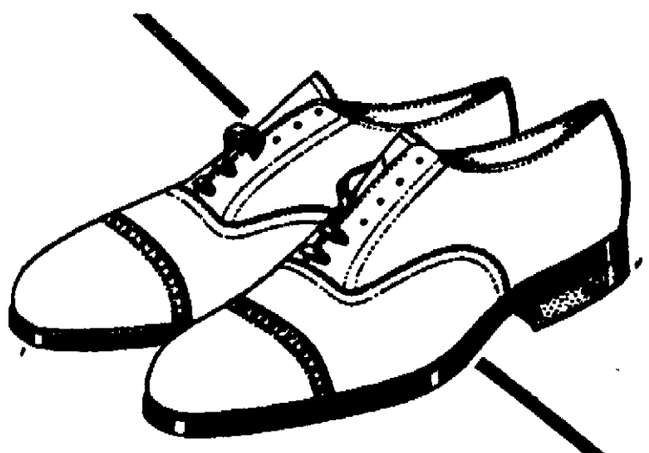

London, June 11.—Italian troops operating against rebel bands in Cyrenaica have slain 168 rebels and captured 3,000 sheep and 2,000 camels, a Central News dispatch from Rome said today. The Italians have lost several native soldiers and two officers have been wounded. The operations are being conducted with planes and armored cars.

Children's Day at First Dutch.

The Children's Day exercises of the Sunday school of the First Reformed Dutch Church will be held in the chapel on Sunday June 13, at 4 o'clock. A pleasing program has been arranged and all parents and friends of the school are cordially invited to be present.

Hotel Cashier.

New York, June 11.—Representing themselves as two newly hired bell boys, two youthful bandits today entered the cashier's cage in the Hotel Navarre, bound and gagged Mary O'Brien, cashier, and escaped with $1,500 in cash.

Don't have achy, draggy feet this summer!

ARCH PRESERVER

Wear the smartly styled Arch Preserver Shoe and also have healthy, vigorous, comfortable feet. This is the shoe with a real "chassis"—no straining, no pinching. Wear one pair and you'll think you have new feet.

Mental Clinic Here June 18

On Friday, June 18, a mental clinic will be held at the county building, 74 John street, Kingston. The hours are from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., and a physician from the Middletown State Hospital, assisted by a social worker, will be in attendance.

This is a free clinic and is devoted to giving advice to individuals in the community who are suffering from mental or nervous disorders and are unable to obtain the necessary advice elsewhere. It is, also recommended as a consultation center for friends, relatives and others who may wish to obtain information in regard to the proper methods which should be carried out regarding the care of anyone in whom they are interested who is suffering from nervous or mental disorders.

Patients in this community who are on parole from the Middletown State Hospital are requested to report at this time.

Race War Encouraged

A race war is raging in California and state authorities, far from trying to pacify the combatants, are adding to the slaughter by endeavoring to poison them all—namely, dark-brown Argentine ants and their redskin opponents, the fire ants. Fifteen years ago entomologists predicted the energetic Argentine ant eventually would crowd out all other breeds and become sole survivors of the ant race in California. Late bulletins from the front indicate that while the prophecy has not fully come to pass, the South American insect has most of his rivals on the run.

Great Feat

One of the most remarkable engineering projects of the world was completed when the first train ran over the railroad between Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Valparaiso, Chile. The line traverses the great mountain chain of the Andes, passing over the chasms and gorges of incredible depth. So deep are the chasms that passengers are known to become absolutely terror-stricken while passing over them. The route was shortened several years ago, and made less dangerous by the construction of tunnels.

COPPER MONEY USED BY ANCIENT GREEKS

Really Marked Beginning of Metal Currency.

The first money of the Greeks was the copper pot. Everybody wanted copper pots and, therefore, anybody would exchange whatever else he had for them. Copper pots became a common denominator in the market, tending to replace barter. Then some young Greek hit upon the idea of making up the copper of which pots were made into strips and using them in the markets instead of pots, William Atherton Du Puy tells us, in Current History. These strips were called "obols," and six of them made a handful. They were the first actual money of the Greeks. They marked the beginning of the use of metals as money.

Two hundred years before Caesar, silver displaced copper as money in Rome because it had been shown to be a handier metal for the purpose. From that time on it was the predominant money metal until, 2,000 years later, gold took precedence.

In 1516 the count of Schlitz opened up a silver mine of considerable productiveness in St. Joachim's thal, or hale, in his native Bohemia. He appreciated the dire need of the Middle ages to have more money as a medium to facilitate trade. So he made his silver into coins and placed on them a picture of St. Joachim. In honor of his native community he called these coins St. Joachim's thalers. They soon became known as Joachimsthalers; then they got over into Germany and were called thalers. Later, in the Netherlands, they were called dalers. They crossed to England and were known as dollars. Joachimsthalers were, in fact, the first dollars.

After the discovery of America, Spain gained a dominance which was largely due to the possession of silver from Mexico and Peru, which provided her with a circulating medium. She made a coin, the "piece-of-eight" of pirate stories, which was a dollar. England could not furnish currency for her colonists, so the latter began to use Spanish pieces-of-eight, which were comparatively abundant. They liked these coins better than the English shillings and pounds, and so, when they set up a money system of their own, they modeled it on the Spanish rather than the English scheme. So did a dollar currency, destined to loom large a hundred and fifty years later, come into being.

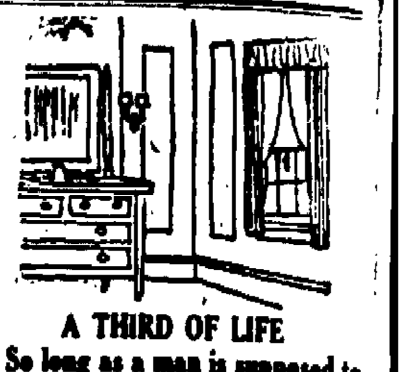

Marco Polo brought the idea of paper money back from China. Many nations have since printed paper money and most of them have had a great deal of difficulty in maintaining a stable value. The United States tried a number of experiments in paper money, but when the Civil war came it had of that sort of currency only the issues of state banks which were of uncertain value. The dollar issued by the banks of one state might be worth 40 cents and those issued by another state might be worth 60 cents.

Boll Weevil Increasing

The cotton boll weevil, one of the worst enemies of American agriculture, threatens to be unusually numerous this year, according to United States Department of Agriculture scouts sent out against the armies of insect pests. Both in the older cotton regions of the South and in the Arizona fields the overwintering insects have been found in considerable numbers. At Tallulah, La., an examination of Spanish moss, in which the weevils usually take shelter for the winter, disclosed 280 of them to a ton of moss, as compared with 16 a ton in 1924, 299 a ton in 1923 and 137 in 1917.

Failure Vs. Success

After 50 years of bachelorhood, Sir Robert Horne, one-time chancellor of the exchequer, spoke loudly in behalf of bachelors while addressing the Glasgow Institute of Journalists. Said he: "Bachelors are a much misunderstood class. . . . The proposal to lay a tax on bachelors, now widely bruited in England, would be opposed to all the accepted principles of taxation, which usually postulate that the more successful a man is the heavier should be his taxes. . . . To lay a tax on bachelors is thus unreasonable, for it would be a tax on failure, not on success. . . . "—Time.

Mere Jumble

A Nevada senator during a speech used the word "intrinsic" and a senator from Oregon picked him up on it.

"Who says I didn't use that word right?" cried the speaker.

"Webster says so."

"Webster? What Webster?"

"Webster's dictionary."

"Now, see here," growled the senator from Nevada. "I'm tired of having that book quoted at me. Why, every schoolboy knows it is a mere jumble of words."—Boston Transcript.

Fear

Fear is a driving force in human conduct. It makes us do things; it keeps us from doing them. It protects from danger, and without a reasonable amount of fear mankind could not live. It is useless to talk about eradicating fear, but in training the child every effort should be made to see that fear does not become a curse instead of a means of protection.

Troglodytes of Cappadocia

Cones Near Udj Assaru.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society Washington D C)

IT IS a curious paradox in the history of human migrations and human development that in that very land which historians and geographers characterize as "the cradle of civilization," there is to be found today a people whose mode of living is, in one of its basic principles, more primitive than that of the most benighted tribes of Africa or the South Pacific.

Residing within a stone's throw, metaphorically speaking, of the wonderful civilization which flourished on the banks of the Nile 6,000 years ago; of the mighty kingdoms of Assyria and Babylonia which arose in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris, their power and splendor dazzling the world 2,000 years before the Christian era; and at the very threshold of ancient Greece, with its unrivaled culture and political advancement, the Troglodytes of Cappadocia still retain toward their fellow men an attitude of mind akin to that which obtained in the Stone age, when there was no such thing as human society, but every man was his own law and the mortal enemy of his neighbor.

The only difference between the society of these Troglodytes and that of primitive man consists in this, that primitive man did not brook the presence of any other man, while here the isolation of the clan takes the place of the isolation of the individual.

The caves, cones, and cliff dwellings of the Cappadocian Troglodytes of both ancient and modern times are to be found in greatest number in the shadow of Asia Minor's loftiest peak, snow-clad Mt. Argaeus (called by the Turks Erjias Dagh), an extinct volcano whose eruption in the dim past laid the foundations and supplied the material for these remarkable habitations, while the Halys river of the ancients (now known as Kizil Irmak) in succeeding centuries became their tireless architect.

The practice of living in caves, in cliffs, or in excavated cavities in the open plain is to be traced to a state of society which we of today have some difficulty in depicting to ourselves. And yet the central thought of the Troglodytic habit is the basic principle upon which ancient civilization was founded. That basic thought was absolute isolation.

Types of Troglodytes.

Several kinds of Troglodytes are still to be seen in various parts of Asia Minor. The most primitive type is to be found in Cilicia Trachela. They may be found in many places, but they are best seen in a pass in the Taurus mountains some ten miles north of Ermenek (Germanicopolis).

The inhabitants of this valley, known as Bakluzan Dere, are cliff-dwellers of the secondary type—that is, they have done considerable work in the way of improving their abodes, whose entrances have been walled in with fences of stout masonry.

The entrances to their dwellings are high up in the almost perpendicular walls of the cliffs, and they are reached solely by means of long poles, which are light enough to be drawn up when the lord of the den and his family are safely housed. And they really are safe from intrusion, for it would require a host to force an entrance against the will of the family.

This very method of reaching the entrance by means of a pole makes it imperative for all the members of the several families of these cliff-dwelling Troglodytes to be strong and vigorous persons, for the sick, the aged, and the infirm can neither enter nor leave the dwelling, nor can they be brought in nor taken out by others, unless they be strapped to the back of a man, who would need to be not only strong, but very active as well.

One ancient writer tells us that some Troglodytes made a practice of killing all those who were not in first-rate physical condition, on the ground that a man who cannot earn his own living has no right to live; and when one sees these dwellings, one can imagine still another reason for killing off the aged and the infirm—because of their inability to get in or out of the house.

Through the cliffs of the Bakluzan there are thickly studded with dwellings that give evidence of being inhabited by a large number of people, the infrequent traveler does not get a glimpse of any of them, nor does he often find a doorway open.

Troglodytes, or semi-Troglodytes, of a ruder but less inhospitable type may be seen in many places in Lycaonia.

Crude Life in Cavities.

At Seral, north of Karaman, a stratum of rock lies upon a bed of clay, which, of course, may be excavated ad infinitum without very great labor, and the formation is made, as it were, for the Troglodytes. But the people who inhabit these abodes are not true Troglodytes, since they use them only during the long summer season.

The life there is most crude, and the cavities in the ground show no signs of having been improved by man. It is certain that the primitive Troglodytes lived in just such dwellings, but for all that, these people are not primitive at heart, for they have made no attempt to secure isolation. The element of fear of mankind is not present—that is, no kind of dead line has been drawn against hostile neighbors.

The Greeks have left us accounts of engrossing interest concerning the Troglodytes of antiquity.

The Greek geographer and historian, Agatharchides, who flourished about 175 B. C., wrote a book on the region about the Red sea. It was intended as a geography for his royal pupil, the heir to the throne of Egypt, who would find it to his interest to know as much as possible about his territories on the Red sea and about the strange people who lived there. This book has perished, but about fifty pages of it were quoted by other writers whose works have survived to our times, and among other things they have preserved Agatharchides' account of the Troglodytes of the region of the Red sea.

Herodotus' account of "the Ethiopians who dwell in holes" informs us that, "of all the nations of whom any account has reached my ears they are by far the swiftest of foot. They feed on serpents, lizards, and other similar reptiles. Their language is unlike that of any other people: it sounds like the screeching of bats." These Troglodytes have been indentified with the Tibboos of Fezzan.

Xenophon gives us a delightful picture of the Troglodytes of Armenia, who have remained so unchanged throughout the centuries that his description might be used of them at this present moment.

In Pumice Stone Cones.

Mount Argaeus, now an extinct volcano, though it was still smouldering in the time of Strabo, is situated almost in the center of the peninsula of Asia Minor. The material ejected by this volcano during the many ages when it was active covers an immense area and consists of a vast bed of pumice stone or tufa of unknown depth, on top of which there flowed a sheet of lava which varies in depth from four to ten or twenty feet.

The territory thus affected by the eruptions of Mount Argaeus extends from the southwest to the northwest of the mountain for a distance of between thirty and forty miles, covering the entire region between Injesu, Martchan, Urgub, Udj Assaru, Nev Shehir, and Tatlar on the west and extending to Soghanlu Dere (valley) on the south, while on the north and northwest it extends far to the north of the Kizil Irmak (Halys), which has been flowing across the bed of pumice stone from remote geological times.

The pumice stone is soft. It is reported that one man excavated a chamber 25 feet long, 13 feet broad, and 10 feet high within the space of 30 days.

Paul Lukas, who traveled in Asia Minor at the behest of Louis XIV, was the first European to visit this region, but his visit was very hurried and strange as it may seem, he thought that these cones were builded by man, and the stories he told about the wonders he saw were not believed by anyone.

And yet Lukas was right, except in supposing that the cones were constructed by man. If indeed he did actually entertain such a belief. As a matter of fact, there are more than 50,000 cones in the field covered by this formation.

The cones of Cappadocia were characteristic features of the country in the third millennium before Christ. History and archeology cannot trace them further, because, as yet, nothing is known about periods in Asia Minor more remote than that; but the spade and the archeologist may soon reveal that history to a waiting world.

HIGH LIGHTS OF THE MODE SEEN IN FASHION'S CENTERS

Scarfs are worn with light tweed mixture coats and suits, and are preferred in short lengths that lend themselves to Ascot tie arrangement at front. The side bow also is liked, and when taffeta square scarfs are worn, the side-back or back tie arrangement is chosen.

Matching scarfs to hosiery and handkerchiefs is a new fad. Girls buy hosiery first and match color as the dominant one for newly handkerchiefs and new scarfs to complete their accessory ensemble. It is noted from observation and inquiry in stores that handbags are bought to blend with hats and gloves.

Miss Julia Lyding Hoyt was seen at a recent event in New York wearing in a scarlet crepe Elizabeth frock very molded with seaming to indicate the waistline, and a panel sash and butterfly bows of black, silver, and scarlet sequins.

Interesting stamped neck-line was noted on a green satin crown held in place by a square diamond pin exactly the size of the strap.

A Lanvin green crepe Roma frock was worn by a young girl with a gathered skirt trimmed with modernistic appliques of embroidery and gold cloth in subtle colorings.

A flared beach wrap of orange rubber reveals an all around border of cerulean blue, a scarf collar and matching revers, one of which has a rubber flower boutonniere.

The zipper closing appears on a sports shirt worn with a suit of matching shirt and knickers featured for outdoor or camp wear in linen or homespun in novelty patterns.

Concerning Iodine

Iodine should be applied as soon after an injury as possible, and then just one painting. Keep iodine in a glass-stoppered bottle, as it evaporates when a cork stopper is used and makes the iodine a trifle much stronger.

THE QUALITY OF MERCY

By STANLEY GREY

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

AT LAST the house door was opened, and then, very slowly and quietly, closed again. Footsteps hesitated along the hall, the light silken hangings were pushed aside with a hand that clung to them as if even their slender support was a comfort, and the tall, carelessly well-dressed boy, his face sick with misery and fear, entered the room. All the familiar beauty of the place might just as well have not existed so far as he was concerned, for all he could see were his three judges. His mother—his dear, jolly mother—was sitting on the very edge of the divan, poised as if ready to jump, at the very slightest excuse, to his side. His old grandfather, sunk low into the depths of a wide, gaily cushioned chair, seemed to be clutching the sides with his long claw-like fingers, while his sunken eyes were wells of sorrowful accusation. His father, just as he had always seen him—fastidious in his appearance, nervous in his movements, tense in every expression, his mouth a tight red line behind which the firm white teeth were snapped together—paced about and swung his clenched hands.

The boy moved forward. Nobody seemed at first to notice him, nobody asked him to sit down. On he came, until the crash of his father's fist, as it struck the long table, brought him to a sickening stop. His father's voice struck him like a sneering lash—

"So! You have stolen another man's money?"

"Yes, father," hesitatingly, "just as I wrote you."

"You thought that you could play the market! You!"

The boy drew a breath of relief. His father would let him explain.

"I know I shouldn't have touched the money at all—but I had a sure tip. I won, really I did at first—then, instead of dropping out I kept on and lost! Everything went wrong—I took more and more to get back what I had taken. I never won again! I've gone deeper and deeper—!"

"Men with brains—you notice I mention brains—have lost. Real men, playing with their own hard-earned dollars! And a young fool like you thought you could turn the trick!"

"I wanted to make enough to pay it all back—honest, I did, father—I wanted to start fresh—and be clean again—just to be straight and clean—clean—" His voice quivered with excited huskiness.

"Why come to me?" His father's tone dripped with sarcastic curiosity. "Why am I chosen to be your accomplice? Am I invited to pay back what you have taken so that your pilfering may never be discovered? So that you may go on again—perhaps in the same way?"

"Why, father!" The anguish in the boy's soul crept into his voice. "You're my father—my own father—where else should I go for help? Please believe me—I did intend to pay it back!"

"Pay! Pay! I am sick of the word!" He pushed back the heavy black hair from his forehead with a hand that seemed heavy with weariness. "You are a good guesser, however, about the paying part, but I'm the one to pay! You're a disgrace. Pack your belongings! Clear out of my sight! Get out of the house!"

The boy shrank as if from a bolt of lightning. There he cowered before the hand that his father had taken from his head and pointed at him with a directness that seemed to penetrate his body and thrust him backwards—and out of home. In a moment his mother was beside him, her small, fair head barely reaching his shoulder. Her agonizing glance took in the two before her—the two so much alike—the man of her choice and the man of her body. She threw her arm about the drooping shoulders—

"No! No!" she panted. "This can't go on! This is no way to settle it! Give him another chance, John—let me help him—I have money—plenty of it—I'll pay!"

Her husband shook his head with dogged persistence.

"I am still head of this house, Mary."

There was no gainsaying this truth, but she was defending not only the tall creature who overtopped her now, but the tiny infant—the toddling baby—the schoolboy whose dependence had been the joy of her life—she played her strongest card.

"He's my boy, too!"

"Bah! I wouldn't be surprised to find some girl mixed up in this."

"No!" shouted the boy, trying to pull away from the sheltering arm. "Don't you dare!"

"You see, Mary, your boy gives me orders."

With a quick, but gentle movement, the culprit twisted free. His bravado was almost good enough to pass for bravery.

"You let mother alone! I'm the one. I know what a fool I've been. I'll not answer another question nor ask another favor. I'll get out!"

"Wait, Fred, dear!" wailed the woman. "Don't be hasty—let me help you—I understand—I know you didn't realize what you were doing!"

"Out it, mother! I'm done!"

"Done? Done?" snapped the father. "I'm the one who's done! My name! My standing! My family!"

Between the sinner and the judge the woman stood dazed. With a desperate sob, she ran across the room and threw herself on her knees by the chair of the crippled old man.

"Father! Father!" she implored, beating his poor body with her groping hands. "My boy! My boy!"

"Just so, Mary—just so," quavered the old man, his arms closing about her. He nodded curtly to the boy. "Tied yourself into a pretty knot, didn't you, Fred?"

"Now you're going to start in at me," groaned the black sheep, making for the doorway.

"Come back here!"

With dragging steps, the boy slouched unwillingly to his grandfather's side, standing there just as he used to stand as a little chap. The old man's voice seemed to have taken on an unconscious vigor.

"I mustn't be understood to be excusing you, Fred, when I remark at this particular moment that you are not the first fool in the world, nor is this same world coming to an end on account of what you have done." His daughter raised her head at the quiet vehemence in his tones.

"Some years ago—" he went on, "I knew another lad—one who acted just as you have done. In this case, however, the employer discovered, quite early in the game, exactly what was going on. He watched him, and was bitterly tempted to turn him over to the law—to disgrace him publicly. But he couldn't!" The silvery head shook slowly. "His hands were tied! His only daughter—the sweetest girl in the world—loved this clerk. It would break her heart. He was a wealthy man, but she was his most precious possession. He couldn't see her suffer. So he thought it all out, and as he was rather clever, and had many ways and means at his disposal, he caused a large sum of money to come the way of his clerk—in a legitimate way, mind you—just to see what he was really made of. The plan worked well, for the fellow, who couldn't have been bad at heart—only foolish—had learned a lesson; he must have been frantic with fear of exposure, for immediately—at once—he put back every cent that he had taken. He ran straight after that and married his employer's daughter. He has succeeded in business—he is one of the most prominent citizens, but to this day, he has never, never dreamed that his theft was discovered, or that he was not only helped to refund it, but was closely watched while he did it!"

"Don't talk about strangers, father," interrupted the mother impatiently. "Think of our own trouble. What are we going to do? Here is our boy—our baby—going to be without a home—without us?"

"I was about to say, Mary," the old voice went on, "that this man has a family. If one of his boys goes wrong, I am sure he would understand—he'd be merciful—could he do differently, remembering how near disaster came to him?"

There was a silence for a moment, then the tall man, the arrogance of whose severity had dominated the scene, who had been listening with the others as the persistent tones rose and fell, came slowly, rather pallid-faced, and tight-lipped towards the speaker. He, too, stood by the gayly cushioned chair, and with eyes of wonder, stared as if he had come upon some strange and overwhelming phenomenon. He tried to speak—but the words wouldn't come. With a quick movement he turned away, and was beside the boy with his arm linked in his.

"Let's go out for a while, Fred," he suggested quietly. "I think we may find a way perhaps to fix this up."

"Oh, father!" breathed the boy, clinging to him gratefully.

"I knew you couldn't be so hard, John," said the mother.

"Just so!" whispered the old man, sinking back again into his chair. "Just so!"

And the man and the boy went out together.

For Peace, Not War

Stores of blood-red ore that lie under rugged mountains in southwestern Texas are still being sought by Indians, but not for war paint. The modern tribesman digs for the mercury which is extracted from the ore. For 30 years the mines in this region have been worked, one company having produced $10,000,000 worth of quicksilver during the last quarter century. Indians and Mexicans inhabit the small mining villages, which remain as silent as tombs during the daytime while the men are working far below the surface of the earth, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In one of the mines is a large cavern reached by a 50-foot ladder, placed there years ago by the primitive tribes. Surrounding bluffs are decorated in Indian designs drawn in red pigment which is prepared from the ore.

Ship Figureheads Prized

Among the most highly prized of the relics saved from old ships of Nelson's day and from other vessels are the carefully carved oak figureheads which adorned the prows, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A London shipbreaker has collected a number of these specimens and, after they are repaired and redecorated, they are in great demand as antiques.

A giant figurehead of the first duke of Wellington in typical of the carvings which were lavished on the ships of olden days.

Overnight News Told in Brief

New York, June 11.—Ten thousand gallons of alcohol found aboard the Steamer Eker, seized off Yonkers, N. Y., April 29, will be poured into the harbor today.

New York—Plans for the erection of a building in Washington to house the Constitution of the United States and to serve as a memorial for those who framed it, were discussed at a dinner given in honor of Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Westbury, N. Y.—The favorite polo pony of Rodman Wanamaker, 2nd, and a participant in polo matches here and abroad, was killed when its hoof caught in the planking at a grade crossing as a train bore down on it. The value of the animal was approximately $4,000.

New York—Checks for $5,711.60 will be sent to relatives of the two members of the crew of the Steamer President Roosevelt who lost their lives in the rescue of the ill fated freighter Antinoe last January. The sixteen members of the lifeboat crew who finally made the rescue were given $1,000 each.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 11.—Hyman Schneider, 10, his mother, Mrs. Myrtle Schneider, and Mrs. Lilly Mack, 55, his grandmother, died of injuries suffered when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a train near here last night. The family was going to the wedding of Mrs. Schneider's brother.

Two Big Cities That Have Much in Common

According to a bulletin of the National Geographic society, New York and Amsterdam have much in common. Each is the largest and most populous city in its respective country. Neither is the political capital of the country, but each is the undisputed commercial dictator and the keypoint of military defense. Each is a seaport, although here the analogy does not follow as closely. Rotterdam's commerce exceeds that of Amsterdam. Amsterdam, however, has the headquarters of all the large shipping companies, just as has New York. Amsterdam is also an important industrial center, with shipbuilding plants, refineries, machine shops, many small factories, diamond polishing mills, etc.

The city of Amsterdam lies in the southwest corner of the great inland body of water known as the Zuyder zee, at the influx of the Amstel and Y rivers. Like Venice it is built on a number of islands, but with much more regularity than the queen of the Adriatic. Roughly, the city plan looks like the profile of a half-wheel, with numerous water spokes and inner rims in regular succession. These rims or successive encircling canals indicate zones of expansion in the past, and, flanked with avenues of elms and tall narrow brick houses with the gables turned toward the street, give a handsome and picturesque effect to the residential section.

Amsterdam might be said to be the first setting of nearly every diamond. Its diamond polishing and cutting mills have been famous since the Sixteenth century, when the art was introduced by Portuguese Jews after the sack of Antwerp. At the present time there are nearly 100 mills, employing several thousand persons. Most of the raw diamonds come from South Africa, although Brazil and the Far East are other sources of supply.

"Caterpillar" on Water

A river towboat, composed of two hulls placed side by side, pontoon style, and carrying between them a power plant operated by an endless chain with paddles attached, is the queer contraption that is offered to solve the problem of inland river navigation on shallow streams, says the Quincy (Ill.) Whig-Journal.

The affair is really a caterpillar tractor boat which crawls through the water or skims along the surface of it. There will be no fouled propellers nor broken paddle wheels caused by interference in low water.

That a boat can crawl through the water with considerable power probably is just as sound a mechanical principle as it is for a caterpillar tractor to make its way across any sort of obstacle.

Tasteless Cod Liver Oil

Have you any disagreeable recollection of cod liver oil? If so, you will agree in calling Drs. Harry E. Dubin and Casimir Funk, biochemists of New York, real benefactors. According to Popular Science Monthly they claim to have developed a new extract from which the nauseous taste is removed and which contains, in a given quantity, several thousand times as many vitamines as the original oil.

Red itching blisters on baby's face healed by Resinol

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 19:—"My baby had eczema for three months and nothing seemed to do him any good until I tried your products. His cheeks were red and covered with blisters, and the itching was so annoying that he could not sleep. After reading your ad in the paper I purchased a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap. Only a few applications stopped the itching entirely and within a week the redness was gone and his skin practically clear. Your ointment is really wonderful and I will praise it to everyone."
